Chamber Chatter

By Claudia Hughes, Chamber Manager

Next week at this time some of us will be "jolting" across Morrow County experiencing just a tiny bit of what our ancestors did 150 years ago. I'm sure we'll have a renewed respect for the hardships they endured along the trail and know beyond a doubt that we're thankful we have a comfortable home and bed to return to that night. There should be plenty of time for thinking along the way either on foot or in the wagon. Wagons Ho!

The chamber has scheduled a clean-up for Main Street on Tuesday, August 17, 5 p.m. Store owners are encouraged to pitch in to pick up litter, pull a few weeds, water flowers, and just add the extra touch before the fair and rodeo and wagon train visitors arrive. Citizens with community pride make this job easier as they take a moment to pull a weed or pick up trash on their daily excursions. Thank you, someone noticed.

Chamber is welcoming Denny Newell, GEODC, as a new member this week. We appreciate being able to share the GEODC office with Denny. Stop in to say "hello" on Tuesdays and Wednesdays.

Special guests at chamber were members of the Oregon Trail Pro Rodeo Court and Rodeo Committee. Don't miss fair and rodeo next week. Some new and exciting events are being offered, including women's bull riding. Bring your guests to the parade and downtown for a bit of shopping. City folks love leaving malls behind to experience rural shops (that direct from a Portland resident who practically shops as a career).

Next week: No chamber on Tuesday. It's become tradition to have lunch at the fairgrounds Thursday of fair week. See you there.

Protect Against Sun-Related Photoaging

Photoaging is a skin condition in which exposure to ultraviolet (UV) radiation such as from sunlight results in wrinkles, loss of skin elasticity, and an uneven skin color. The skin may become yellow and leathery. The effect of photoaging on skin is the same as with the normal aging process but often is much more severe and occurs more rapidly. Protection against UV rays of the sun begins by spending less time in direct sunlight. If extensive sun exposure cannot be avoided, wear protective clothing such as long sleeve shirts and wide-brimmed hats to prevent photoaging.

Another approach to prevention of photoaging is through the application of sunscreen products to the skin. According to a recent issue of Postgraduate Medicine, sunscreens offer the single most important method of protecting against harmful effects of the sun. Physical sunscreens such as zinc oxide reflect and scatter UV light as it reaches the skin. Zinc oxide cream may be messy to use and often it is washed off while swimming or sweating. Chemical sunscreens, such as para-aminobenzoic acid and the benzophenones, absorb UV radiation. The UV radiation absorbing ability of chemical sunscreens is expressed as an SPF value. Skin specialists typically recommend sunscreens that have an SPF value of 15 or higher.
