Chamber Chatter
By Claudia Hughes, Chamber Manager

"Bicycles are coming, bicycles are coming". Next week at this time they will have come and gone as they followed the Oregon Trail and learned a bit about the history at each community stop. The chamber has printed "Welcome to Heppner" stickers to put on their lunch bags and to have available for the local retailers and servers to wear. We hope to encourage the cyclists to stay and play awhile before traveling on to Ione. Channel 2 will be in Heppner and they are interested in learning about Cycle Oregon III, as well as VI, and how the proceeds were used at that time. Ideas for use of '93 proceedings range from Christmas lights tree project, possible mural, rodeo banners, to matching funds for grants, etc. The selected project will be lasting and benefit everyone.

This time of the year the flowers around town seem extra beautiful and special appreciation goes to the merchants with the beautiful planters, the Garden Club, the Rawlins and all others taking pride in our community. It will be a welcome sight for our visitors and all too soon, the fall frosts will change the picture. No chamber on Tuesday, Sept. 14, as it will be "all pioneers" in place to serve. Chamber will resume on Sept. 21 with the program welcoming Terry Edvalson, Jim Kraft and Patricia Middeburg from Eastern Oregon State College. They will be discussing regional services and the Heppner Gap study. Thought for the week: "Not he who has little, but he who wishes more, is poor"...Seneca

Coal Tar Can Be Effective Against Psoriasis

Psoriasis is a chronic skin condition that affects up to 3 percent of the population. This condition, which affects primarily caucasians, is most common in adults, occurring most frequently around the age of 30. While psoriasis is not necessarily inherited, about thirty percent of persons with psoriasis have at least one parent or grandparent who had the condition. Inflamed pink or dull red patches of skin become covered with thick silvery scales. Chronic itching, the most common symptom, is experienced by over eighty percent of psoriasis sufferers. While there is no specific cure for psoriasis, over-the-counter (OTC) medicines containing coal tar may help reduce the severity of itching.

One reference indicates that products containing coal tar have been used to treat psoriasis for about a hundred years. According to the Handbook of Nonprescription Drugs, the mechanism of action of coal tar in psoriasis is not known. Skin specialists believe it may slow the production of new skin cells. It may also aid in the removal of psoriatic scales. Coal tar is considered safe and effective for self-treatment in concentrations of 0.5 to 5 percent. Many of the gel forms of coal tar are not greasy and do not stain clothes as do some of the other dosage forms. Crude coal tar and ultraviolet radiation have been used for over 60 years to treat psoriasis.
