Chamber Chatter

By Claudia Hughes, Chamber Manager

Oregon Magazine has an article on planning a small town in the big city. Oregon metropolitan areas are trying to incorporate the many features found in older small towns in the middle of large cities. The "neo-traditional" neighborhood, as it is called, will be a combination of apartments, townhouses, and small single family dwellings surrounding a core of retail and public services and a transit stop. A main street, village green and parks will be included with undeveloped open space and hiking trails. (They may have a bit of trouble making open space as we know it.) It seems a bit frightening that with all the real communities in Oregon that people have to resort to creating a make-believe one in a city. They have our sympathy and we can be grateful that we have the quality of life they're trying to create right under our nose and often don't recognize it. Examples such as this serve to remind us how important it is that we support, maintain and encourage our real towns in Morrow County where people still realize that food comes from hard work, long hours of labor, and the land; and where families continue to work hard on ongoing family businesses on Main street as well as in agriculture. Progress and positive change is occurring as we all work together to maintain this way of life, and as we look at ways of encouraging those who have to simulate it, to visit, Heppner, where rural is for real.

Chamber is busy right now, applying for a grant for a city map, planning lunch with Santa, working on the tourism assessment, readying Christmas decoration, preparing for Town and Country, and accepting nominations for Man, Woman, Business and Educator of the Year. Volunteers are working extra hard and additional help is most welcome.

"Business After Hours" will be held at 6 p.m. Tuesday, November 30 at Gardner's Men's Wear. This is an opportunity to learn about our local businesses while enjoying refreshments and informal visiting.

Letter to the Editor

Elk hunters help seniors

To the Editor:

"Great people".
On Saturday Nov. 13, 1993, my husband and I were returning home from Pendleton when the storm and bad roads caused us to stall out; between Dale and Meadowbrook, southbound on Hwy. 395. We had started to straighten out our tire chains, when a couple of wonderful men stopped and put the chains on for us. They were elk hunters from Heppner--I didn't get any names.

Heartfelt thanks from a couple of senior citizens from Canyon City.
