

Burkenbines hear news of LA quake

Lloyd Burkenbine of Heppner, reports that his two granddaughters who live in Los Angeles made it through the Jan. 17 earthquake without serious consequences. The girls, both of whom are attending college in the Los Angeles area, called the Burkenbines Monday to let their grandparents know that they were safe. Lynn Burkenbine told Lloyd and Chris that she was scared more than anything else. Michelle Burkenbine, however, reported that she and her roommate were both thrown from their beds and that the older house in which she was living was "totally trashed" by the quake. The girls said that the damage was "far worse than early reports."

Chamber Chatter

By Claudia Hughes, chamber manager

Mother Nature seems to be playing tricks on us. Seems like April with deer and cattle contentedly grazing on the hillsides, lawns beginning to turn green, two pheasants in battle over a lone female, and 54 degrees at 8:30 a.m. There are probably a few avid golfers visible on the course. However, my calendar says it's January 18 and time to buckle down on events to come instead of having a bad case of spring fever.

One hundred eighty-seven folks crowded into the Elks for the Town and Country banquet, as well-deserving volunteers were honored and some great laughs were shared with the Slob Sisters. We appreciate Kinzua, Jordan Elevator, Morrow Soil and Water Conservation District, Oregon Wheat League, Pendleton Grain Growers, Cargill, Bank of Eastern Oregon, First Interstate Bank and Morrow County Grain Growers, whose donations helped make the speakers possible. Additional contributions have been pledged. It's everyone working together, including high school servers and the Garden Club who make this annual event a reality for Heppner.

Mark your Calendars for the annual Heppner Economic Development Meeting and dinner January 26 at the Heppner Elks. John Huffaker, the regional representative for the Oregon Economic Development Department, will be the featured speaker.

It's time to start thinking green with our Wee Bit 'O Ireland celebration just eight weeks away. Please keep your eyes open for auction items or talk your friends around the state into recruiting promotional items from their area. This auction keeps the celebration ongoing, so it's important that we work hard for its success. Interested persons who would like to help should attend a meeting at the Kuhn, Spicer & Mills office at 4 p.m. Thursday, Jan. 20.

Next week's chamber will be a program on gang prevention. Thought for the week: "Honesty is contagious, just like dishonesty. We need more truth in the world."

training, but all leaders are welcome and can provide valuable information for discussion, said a press release.

There will be a hosted dinner starting at 5:30 p.m. This will be a good time for everyone to get acquainted, said Bill Broderick, extension agent.

If you plan to attend or have questions contact Broderick at the Morrow County Extension Office 676-9642.
