

City experience beneficial to teens

The dew may be off the Rose City, but some Heppner eighth-graders are still dewey-eyed about their recent experience in Portland as a part of the Heppner/Centennial annual exchange program.

In the exchange, now in its 14th year, Heppner eighth-graders attend school at Centennial Middle School in the Portland area and stay with families of Centennial students. In return Centennial eighth-graders attend school at Heppner Junior High and stay with Heppner/Lexington area families during that week.

Most of the HJH kids report a wonderful time, especially during their trip to downtown Portland.

Zeb Johnson, 15, stayed with Bill and Luana Lambert and their children, Jim, 8th grade, and Jennifer, sixth grade. Bill is a computer repairman and Luana is in retail sales. Zeb said that visiting the mall was the most fun and he brought home some new shoes and a hat. Zeb's host family took him on a boat ride up and down the Willamette River, which, says Zeb, was "really boring." Zeb is the son of Dick Johnson, Echo.

The Heppner kids had a little fun with their supposedly more sophisticated city counterparts. "I told them that we rode horses to school," said Katie. "And they believed us." The Heppner kids said that the Centennial kids at first called them snobs and hicks. "They asked me, 'Are you the hick?'" said Zeb. Still, it didn't seem to bother the HJH eighth graders much.

There was a bigger variety of cliques at Centennial, the "preppies", the "skaters" (skateboarders), the "druggies" and the "normal" kids. "They had some weird kids," said Jessica. "They even had a 'vampire'." The "vampire" dressed up in black clothes and wore white makeup. Still, says Travis, the kids on the whole were pretty nice. "I thought they would be rude," he said. "But they were nice." "It was a pretty good school," added Jessica.

The school lunch menu was about as varied as the student groups, with several different sections from which to choose—pizza, sandwiches, oriental food and salads. The kids report that the food, however, "was about as good as it is here." Whatever that means.

Not too many of the Centennial kids were out for sports, because they have to pay to participate and have competitive tryouts for the school teams. "I can't believe how easy their PE classes were," said Katie. She said that the students sign up for different PE subjects for one or two weeks at a time on rotating basis.

Although Centennial Middle School has around 855 students, the Heppner students said that it didn't seem that big, because of the layout of the school. Some of the Centennial families lived close enough for the students to walk and others rode the bus.

When the Heppner kids returned home, after a week that went by too fast, they brought with them memories, a greater understanding of people and what may turn into lifelong friendships. Several HJH students have already invited their Centennial classmates to come to Heppner and some have made plans to visit their hosts again in Portland.

Monday, Tuesday, Thursday and Friday and at 10:45 Wednesdays. Jessica said that one time she went to the wrong class in school and ended up sitting through the class twice. "It was embarrassing," she said. Jessica is the daughter of Jim and Georgia VanWinkle, Heppner.

Katie Nichols, 14, stayed with Leslie and Dave Stadler and their children, Amber, 8th grade, Cody, 6th grade, and Katie, kindergarten. Leslie works at K-Mart and Dave is a construction worker. Katie's trip to the zoo was marred by the death of an animal. A blind deer or antelope became confused, began running in circles and eventually drowned in a pool at the zoo. The unfortunate incident made the evening news. Katie said that she especially liked the trip to downtown Portland and to Nike Town. At Nike Town, she said there were shoes floating in water and tennis balls under a glass floor. Katie is the daughter of Matt and Darlene Clark, Heppner.

Jessica VanWinkle, 13, stayed with Liz and Jerry Thiringer and their children, Cara, an 8th grader, and Tess, nine, Portland. Jessica said she liked the trip to OMSI, especially a 3-D Grand Canyon display. She says that school work is easier at Centennial (which is exactly what the Centennial kids said about school at Heppner). Classes at Centennial start much later, at 9:45

McElligott chosen girls state delegate

Bridget McElligott, Ione High School junior, has been selected as the lone Legion Auxiliary Unit no. 95 delegate to Girls State, Jean Jepsen, Girls State chairman, has announced.

Girls are selected to attend the week-long youth seminar on the basis of leadership, character and honesty, cooperativeness, community service and participation, scholarship and physical fitness, says Jepsen.

Bridget, in addition to playing basketball and volleyball at Ione High School, is a member of 4-H and active in cooking, sewing and livestock groups. She is also a member of the International Club and Future Business Leaders of America.

The 17 year-old is not the first McElligott in her family to attend Girls State. Sisters, Terry and Grace, both attended. The daughter of L.J. McElligott and the late Maryann McElligott, Bridget has four sisters and three brothers.

During Girls State, the girls chosen as delegates will elect city, county and state officials; set up their own city and county governments; and conduct mock trials. They will also elect members of their own legislature who introduce, debate and pass bills. All girls who attend will have an opportunity to take an active role in the government they create. Besides the government process, flag raising and lowering, workshops on leadership, bill writing and parliamentary procedure, a talent show, a picnic and campaign rallies will be held during the week.

In addition to the American Legion Auxiliary, Bridget is sponsored by the Morrow County Grain Growers.

Girls State will be held June 26 through July 1 at the University of Oregon at Eugene.

Local Auxiliary president is Helen Crawford.

Chamber Chatter

By Claudia Hughes, Chamber Manager

The previous Kinzua owners have given Heppner an opportunity to accomplish great things for the community with a gift of $250,000. It's a bit like winning a lottery. Everywhere you go great ideas are being tossed about ranging from the Heppner swimming pool project, to park restrooms, to an activity facility at the old pool site to include tennis court and winter ice skating, to doubling the funds through grant opportunities. The committee is going to have their work cut out for them, but what rewarding results, thanks to Kinzua. Hopefully, it will be a lasting gift from which many people will benefit for years to come.

Tourism, or Heppner's ability to attract visitors, comes up as one diversified way of helping the economy. The Oregon Economic Development Department just sent a letter requesting a list of farmers and ranchers who would be interested in offering some kind of activities to the general public. These activities can be anything from staying on the ranch and participating in the actual work, to taking a trail ride, to just stopping by and observing the operation for a few hours. If there are farmers and ranchers in south Morrow County interested in learning more about this, give me a call.

Bill Scott, director of the Oregon Economic Development Department, will be addressing Chamber, HEDC, and HCC on Wednesday, June 1, at the Elks during a noon luncheon. Chamber has been rescheduled for Wednesday of that week, so please mark your calendars.

The program next week will be Skip Matthews presenting the proposed Swimming Pool Project.

Thought for the week: "One of the greatest sources of energy is pride in what we are doing."

Tarnasky named to OSU dean's list

Alecia Tarnasky, Heppner, has qualified for the dean's list winter term at Oregon State University. To qualify for the dean's list a student must carry at least 12 graded hours and maintain a grade point average of 3.5 to 4.

Tarnasky maintained a 3.91 grade point average.
