

Heppner FFA elects officers

FFA officers l-r: Willie DeBoer, Jossie Evans, Mike Alldritt, Tina Kemp, John Qualls, Brent Wright.

The Heppner Future Farmers of America recently elected officers for the 1994-95 school year. Brent Wright was elected president; John Qualls, vice president; Tina Kemp, secretary; Mike Alldritt, treasurer; Jossie Evans, reporter; and Willie DeBoer, sentinel.

The new set of officers are planning many activities. One of the many highlights of next year is the state convention which all FFA members may attend in various capacities. The convention will be held next March in Hermiston. "This past year has been a very successful year for our chapter and the members are looking forward to being involved in all that the FFA has to offer," says Jossie Evans, reporter.

A land lab pole barn laboratory building is being constructed by the Heppner High Agriculture Mechanics Class. It is 30'x40'x12' and will be used for lab instruction mainly in the animal science area such as veterinary practices, reproduction practices and livestock evaluation. Those who have helped in the construction of this building by donating equipment, services and building materials include Pettyjohn Hardware, Miller Welding, VanArsdale Construction, Morrow County Road Department, Columbia Basin Electric, Dick Wilkinson Ranches, Morrow County Grain Growers, the Heppner Ranger District, Co-Gen Plant, Kinzua Corporation, Dave Piper and John Kilkenny Ranches.

another, either short term or long term. For some, these meetings are task oriented; for others, they are a social occasion. Some leave meetings feeling food about the group relationship, while others leave in frustration. A comparison of self-directed teams as opposed to traditional work groups follows:

Chamber Chatter

By Claudia Hughes, chamber manager

Many volunteer groups work together in small communities to accomplish tasks that would never happen without their efforts. Very few in Heppner have not served on one committee or

Traditional work groups
Take directions
Seek individual rewards
Focus on blame
Compete
Stop at preset goals
Demand more resources
React to emergencies
Spend money to improve quality

Self-directed teams
Take initiative
Focus on team contributions
Concentrate on solutions
Cooperate
Continually improve and innovate
Work with what they have Take steps to prevent them
Save money by improving quality

Give the new approach a try. It could make all the difference in the success or failure of your committee. Some groups have taken the time to analyze the dynamics of their team with lasting positive results. Thought for the week: "life is like riding a bicycle. You don't fall off unless you stop pedaling".
