Letters to the Editor

Care for animals in winter months

To the Editor:

My youngest aunt once asked my beloved grandmother, "Has it come to this that I must work?" She assured her it had.

I got to thinking today about how cold it is out there for our two legged, and four legged friends, and that yes, it has come to this, that special things must be done to help them through the cold winter months, as we do in the other months.

In the cold winter months, our animals or birds cannot drink if the water is frozen over, and need to have warm water poured in their water bowls several times a day, as they need water as much now as they do in other seasons.

They will burn up their fat much more rapidly in the winter than they do in other months. So, they need to be fed quite a bit more. I hope your animals all have warm places to sleep, and to get out of the cold. I remember how nice and cuddly the barn was for the cows and horse, and of course the cats. Our dog always had the well made dog house, with heat, and a blanket or two, and a carpet.

It hurts to be cold, lonely, thirsty and too cold for the children or the rest of the family to come to see them. They too need love and care.
