Car insurance advice offered

'Tis the season for rain, sleet, snow, black ice, and, unfortunately, higher risk of "fender benders".

Signs will warn area motorists

Several times each year, fog, ice and dust make driving unpredictable on Interstate 84 between Pendleton and Boardman. In early January, when thick fog reduced visibility and ice made the roadway slippery, electronic reader boards warned drivers to slow down.

Beginning this month, the Oregon Department of Transportation (ODOT) can activate five new electronic reader boards on major roadways in the vicinity of the Umatilla Army Depot to display road conditions and information. These roadways include Interstate 84, Interstate 82 and Highway 730.

The reader boards have been installed to warn drivers to turn around in case of an accident involving chemical weapons at the depot. However, ODOT can use the reader boards on a daily basis to warn drivers of hazardous road conditions. The electronic signs can also alert motorists of road maintenance activities.

"While the chances of a depot accident are slim, we want to make sure the signs can also be used to warn motorists of natural hazards, such as dust storms and icy roadways," said Morrow County CSEPP coordinator Casey Beard.

"These signs are considered a traffic control device, so we can't tell drivers to have a nice day. However, we can alert them to slow down or to detour around a hazardous or closed stretch or the roadway," says ODOT spokesman Terry McArtor.

McArtor says the signs will allow ODOT to warn drivers shortly after state police officers or ODOT crews report hazardous road conditions. The signs can be activated day or night, seven days a week. In addition to the five new signs, ODOT operates electronic reader boards on Interstate 84 near Cabbage Hill and Ladd Canyon.

"There are some steps that drivers can take that will reduce their stress should they find themselves in an auto accident," says Marianne Macina, regional manager for the Western Insurance Information Service (WIIS). "The most important thing for consumers to do is to find out now, no matter whether any mishap happens to them later or not, exactly what their insurance covers."

According to Macina, many people wait until they get into an accident before they ask questions about what their auto insurance will pay for. "This can be stressful at the time of the fender bender, especially if someone is injured, the vehicle cannot be driven or if the event occurs after working hours or over a weekend," Macina warns.

Your insurance companies through WIIS recommend you ask your agent or company representative the following questions before you ever have to file a claim:

How much liability insurance do I have to pay for any damage I might cause to another vehicle or injuries to other people? How much coverage do I have should passengers in my car get injured? What happens and what coverages do I have if I collide with an uninsured motorist? Do I have and do I want the optional collision coverage that will pay for the damages to my car?

Do I need and have the optional comprehensive coverage for glass breakage and theft? What are my deductible amounts? Will my insurance pay for the towing costs if my car can't be driven? (If the answer is no, ask yourself: Do I subscribe to any other service that might provide towing costs, such as AAA?) If I have to rent a car due to loss of use of my vehicle, will my insurance pay for the rental costs? If the other vehicle's driver is at fault, can I expect reasonable rental car reimbursement if I have no other vehicle? Who, if anyone, pays for a rental car if my vehicle is struck by an uninsured motorist?

If I am involved in an auto accident, what is the name and the phone number of the insurance company claims adjuster, representative or insurance agent I should contact immediately (that information is usually found on your proof of insurance which should be kept in your glove compartment)?
