HHS players, Lions, clean creek

Members of the creek cleaning crew show the pile of brush pulled out of Willow Creek on Sunday. The creek cleaning was done as a joint money raising project by the Wildhorse Club and the Heppner Lions Club. The project is funded by the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers as a flood protection measure.

Yes, even the kitchen sink came out of the creek, as Gary Watkins shows.

Members of the Heppner High School football team and Lions Club, armed with chain saws, rakes, pickups and anything needed, recently cleaned Willow Creek of trees limbs and debris that was blocking the passage way within the city limits.

Cowboy dies en route to OTRP

Oregon Trail Pro Rodeo announcer Bob Tallman gave a "moving" tribute to Shawn McMullan, professional calf roper, who was killed in a traffic accident Saturday, Aug. 17, while en route to the OTRP from another rodeo in Canby.

McMullan, 26, of Iraan, Texas, was killed around 3 a.m. when the pickup in which he was riding was struck by a station wagon traveling the wrong way on Interstate 84 in the Columbia River Gorge near the Multnomah Falls exit.

The driver of the station wagon, Dawn Marie Ryba, 28, of White Salmon, Washington, was also killed in the collision.

Jarrod Grieve, 25, Australia, driver of McMullan's truck and horse trailer, was airlifted to Emanuel Hospital in Portland. He was treated for facial lacerations and released Sunday morning, Aug. 18.

Calf roper, Stran Smith, 26, Tell, Texas, who was riding in the living quarters of the trailer, sustained minor injuries.

One of the two horses in the trailer sustained minor cuts.

Both vehicles were traveling an estimated 65 mph, according to a Multnomah County Sheriff's office news release.

The accident closed the east-bound lanes of the freeway for about five hours.

McMullan, one of the Professional Rodeo Cowboy's Association's most successful calf ropers over the past four years, finished third in the world standings the past three seasons. He had career earnings of $511,451.

In eighth place this season, McMullan was on the way to qualify for his fifth straight appearance in the National Finals Rodeo in Las Vegas.
