4-H News

Wild Riders 4-H Club

Wild Riders 4-H Club will hold an organizational meeting on Monday, Nov. 18, at 7 p.m. in the 4-H annex building at the Morrow County Fairgrounds. Parents, members and anyone else interested in the 4-H Horse Project are welcome to attend.

This will be a planning and organizational meeting, so input about goals and expectations will be needed from all in attendance. Those interested should bring their "equine dreams, hopes and desires and we'll see what can be achieved in the coming year," said a group spokesperson.

For more information, contact Tricia Coe, 676-5300, Merlyn Robinson, 676-9761, or Katherine Dale, 676-5896.

Barnyarders 4-H Club

By Tiffany Piper, reporter
The Barnyarders 4-H Club held a meeting on Oct. 28 to elect new officers. Members elected were Julie Proctor, president, Cody Bellamy, vice-president, Emily Unruh, secretary/treasurer, and Tiffany Piper, reporter. Bill Jepsen is still the club leader. Everyone in the group thinks that the new officers will be great at their jobs.

The club has four new members-Brandon Seitz, Amy Jepsen, Kelsey McKinney and Barbara Holland.

Everyone who wanted to signed up for a red card at the Pendleton Grain Growers. This will give members discounts on their 4-H purchases.

To the Editor:

I have been involved in the Artifactory committee for many years as a member of Soroptimist International of Heppner. This year I have heard many negative comments about the fact that we are going to charge a $2 admission fee. I would like to defend our decision.

We are a service organization. The money that we take from a community in the form of bake sales and the Artifactory is given back to the community in the form of scholarships, donations, etc. The Artifactory is the prime revenue source for the youth Citizenship Awards, $250, and Academic/Vo-Tech scholarships, $800, for our area youth. We would like to increase those amounts in the coming years.

The expenses associated with hosting the Artifactory have increased and we felt that an admission charge of $2 could help offset those expenses. Two dollars was reasonable since other area craft fairs charge $5 or more.

Come on Heppner, don't penalize our area youth by boycotting the Artifactory. We'll give you a cup of coffee and tables to sit and visit and chances to win hourly door prizes for your $2. Remember, Saturday, Dec. 7, 10 a.m.-3 p.m. at the Morrow County Fairgrounds.

Topic Club hears program on investing

"Women and Investing" was the topic presented by Anda Kay Zastrow, Bank of Eastern Oregon investment specialist, at the October meeting of the Topic Club.

Zastrow said that women need to know how to handle their money. According to statistics, women live at least seven years longer than their husbands. Therefore, they will probably be responsible for all financial decisions. It is said that women live 25 percent of their lives after retiring, so they should plan ahead, considering how much retirement income they might need. There are many investment counselors who will help people plan ahead so that their money can be invested to bring in the best return.

According to Zastrow, start by listing assets and then note financial needs to continue living as previously. Probably 75-80 percent of the past income will be needed to maintain current living standards. This is not a hard, fast rule, but will give one a basis to start from, she said.

A report from the library showed that pre-school children are coming to the library on Tuesday and Wednesday for the story hour in the morning. Also, kindergarten children come to the library on Monday for a story hour presented by Kerry Rietmann.

Lea Peterson announced that contact had been made through the school news letter asking if any parents or students would like to have the public library open for some day after school for study. As yet, there has been no response.

The group met at the home of Margaret Morgan, with Nancy McElligott as co-hostess.
