OWGL fall workshop set

The Oregon Wheat Growers League (OWGL) set its annual fall meeting for Monday, Sept. 15, at the Best Western Sunridge Inn in Baker City. The September meeting of the OWGL's board of directors will follow on Tuesday, Sept. 16.

This year's workshop is organized as an informal strategic planning session, according to OWGL executive vice president Daren Coppock. The morning session will include discussion and speakers focusing on the League's present activities, while the afternoon will focus on OWGL's structure and mission in the future.

Invited speakers include OWGL Salem representative Mike Dewey, Oregon Wheat Commission administrator Richard Fritz, Dave Paul from USDA's Risk Management Agency, Glenn Vanselow from the Pacific Northwest Waterways Association, and an agency representative to discuss the new air quality rules recently adopted by the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA).

Coppock will review a 1996 wheat industry strategic plan with the group, to determine which issues from that effort remain priority concerns, and OWGL vice president Mac Kerns will describe a proposed new committee structure for the Wheat League.

Terry Witt of Oregonians for Food and Shelter (OFS) has been invited to address the Tuesday board meeting about spray drift workshops which are being developed by OFS under a joint OFS-OWGL grant contract with EPA.

Lunch at the workshop will be complementary to all OWGL members who RSVP to the league office, 276-7330, by Tuesday, Sept. 9.

The agenda for the workshop may be found on the OWGL Web site, <http://www.owgl.org>.

This annual event sets the stage for the annual OWGL state convention, which will be held at the DoubleTree/Lloyd Center Hotel in Portland, Nov. 30-Dec. 3.

New presidents starts at BMCC

With a new president at the head of the table, the Blue Mountain Community College Board of Directors started a new era for the college as their regular August board meeting got underway. And the new president, Dr. Nicki Harrington, has been busy. "I'm working to balance my time in three areas-learning the internal workings of the college, introducing myself to key players and organizations within the college district and interacting with appropriate groups outside the college district," said Harrington.

Harrington's interactions with staff and community have led her to an initial assessment of BMCC as well-grounded. "Our budget is in good shape and the basic college structure, it's foundation, is very strong," said Harrington. "However, the college does have areas that need work. Again looking at this as an initial assessment, I feel we have four main areas to address-personnel, staff development, long range planning, and external partnerships."

One of Harrington's major moves, according to a BMCC news release, is toward planning and development. A three-day in-service and strategic planning session is planned for October. A goal setting session for the president, with input from the board will take place this fall, and the concept of developing a master facilities plan for off-campus Centers is being discussed. These planning sessions will culminate in a long-range plan which will bring together the teaching and learning, technology, and financial components of the college, continued the release.

Harrington reported that a bill which allows students from the states of Washington, Idaho, Nevada and California to pay tuition at in-state rates was signed last week by Governor Kitzhaber. She explained there are several unanswered questions in regard to implementation of the bill which should be decided prior to implementation October 4.

In other business the board:

-Appointed Jeffrey Drop to a second term on the BMCC Budget Committee. Harrington also reported there are two budget committee vacancies which are yet to be filled.

-Approved a one-term contract with Dr. James Whittaker. Whittaker will fill a vacancy in the math department.

-Approved the retirement of Lee Eavenson and commended him for his contribution to the college. Paul McCarrell reported that Eavenson, the auto body repair technology instructor, is retiring due to health reasons. That program will be put on inactive status during which time its future viability will be reviewed.

-Approved the appointment of Harrington to the Pendleton Convention Center Commission.
