Neighborhood Watch gets underway

A group of 20 local citizens and the Heppner Police met on Aug. 11 to organize a Neighborhood Watch Program in an effort to help alleviate the crime problem in Heppner.

Michael Jenkins, a former member of the Boardman Police Dept., spoke to the group and provided some information on how to establish a program, what things to include in a successful program and what to avoid. Several individuals volunteered to be "block captains," who will coordinate the program in their particular neighborhoods and Lyle Verrall volunteered to coordinate the entire program with the block captains and the Heppner Police Dept.

A follow-up meeting will be held Thursday, Sept. 3 at 7 p.m. at the Morrow County Family Services Center conference room, located above the Coast to Coast store on Main Street. Anyone interested in becoming involved with the Neighborhood Watch Program is invited to attend. Interested youth are especially encouraged to participate said a spokesperson.
