Chamber Chatter

By Claudia Hughes, Chamber Manager

Jonathan Nicholas, Portland Oregonian columnist, says, "Heppner's Courthouse is my favorite." No argument there. The Morrow County Courthouse is included in the book, "Exploring Oregon's Historic Courthouses", by Kathleen Wiederhold, who visited the Morrow County Museum for research while writing the book. Our museum has a copy.

It was refreshing to meet Jack and Helen Braithwaite, visitors from Marshfield, Massachusetts. Recently retired, their joint goal was to travel coast to coast from one Marshfield (renamed Coos Bay in 1944) to the other.

Jack preferred to drive, exploring backroad communities while Helen cycled 50 miles a day. Their visit was delightful but much too short on Little Buttercreek. I hope our paths cross again. Meeting new people is truly one of the perks of working at the Chamber. (Read more about their adventure in this issue of the Gazette.)

"When the going gets tough, the tough get going." Our community is hopeful that our hospital and nursing home can continue on. Solutions are being sought and ideas are welcomed. There are no easy answers, but, as with all things in a rural community, if you don't use it, you lose it. Now is the time. If you're ill, head for the hill.

Businesses with fewer than 25 employees are reminded that there are still monies available for employers and employees to assist with employee training needs. On-site training, hiring staff while others train, and employer conferences are just a few of the opportunities offered through the Morrow Umatilla (Region 12) Workforce Committee. For more information and a simple application form, contact Mary Nixon at 541-276-9050, Ext. 230.

Chamber Ambassadors Jerri Sly, Pat Sweeney, Trish Sweeney and Nova Sweeney represented Heppner at the state convention in Hermiston last weekend. They took along a varied gift basket door prize, thanks to local businesses and handed out the famous leprechaun lapel pins.

Looking ahead, mark your calendars for a Spooktacular event in Heppner Thursday, October 29.

HHS holds homecoming parade downtown

Members of the class of 2001 march downtown during the Heppner High School homecoming parade Thursday afternoon in downtown Heppner.

Garden Club tours yards

A tour of the Heppner Garden Club yards of the month was held Sept. 14, visiting the Glen Smiths, Dale Adlers, Charles Bailey and the Archie Padberg's yards.

"Each yard was quite unique in its own way, very lovely and informative to see," said a Garden Club spokesperson. "The Gonty's yard was beautiful also." Each yard had a sign displayed in it for a month. The sign and a gift were donated by Green Feed and Seed.

The next meeting will be Monday, Oct. 5 at the Senior Center at 7 p.m. The program will be "Trees from Urban Forests." The guest speaker will be Katie Klause, Eastern Oregon forester.

Everyone is invited to attend.
