

Judy Rea to head OWGL

Morrow County farmer Judy Rea was elected president of the Oregon Wheat Growers League. She is the league's first woman president in its 72-year existence. Judy and her husband, Keith, farm near Lone. Other officers for the next year include Sherman Reese, Echo, vice president; Tom McCoy, Sherman County, secretary-treasurer, and Mac Kerns, Haines, past president. Daren Coppock continues as executive vice president.

Rea said her goals for the OWGL include increasing membership. She said efforts by the league and its national arm, the National Association of Wheat Growers, brought farmers some $3 billion in government payments this year.

"We are definitely going to push for the marketing tools that were promised in the 1996 farm bill," she said.

"We have done what is required of us in the farm bill, and now it's up to Washington to activate their end and give us the marketing tools we need."

Rea joins Sharon Beck, Cove, president of the Oregon Cattlemen's Association, as a leader in Oregon's two major commodities - beef and wheat. Both Rea and Beck take active roles in running their farms.

"I do the books and records and raise the kids," Rea said. The Reas have four grown sons.

Rea said leadership roles should be open to women as a matter of course. "I've never made an issue of being a woman" she said.

Rea has headed OWGL committees and two years ago was elected secretary-treasurer, serving this year as vice president. "I want the league to be proactive not re-active," she said. Rea said she wants the league to continue working closely with the Oregon Wheat Commission. Nationally, she said she is impressed by the new leadership in NAWG and in U. S. Wheat Associates, the foreign marketing arm of the wheat industry.

Chamber Chatter

By Claudia Hughes, Chamber Manager

Heppner was truly lit up on Thursday with our second holiday light parade, the new trees all alit, great food from our local businesses and spirits high. Four judges put their heads together to make the decision on winners of the parade. First place went to the Harrison Family with their creative antique entry; second to Valby Church; and third to the smallest entry, Doris Brosnan, the walking Christmas tree. The Heppner FFA was named honorable mention.

If it weren't for the many great volunteers, there wouldn't be lights up and down Main Street. Chamber ambassador Suzanne Jepsen made many calls to organize the lighting and an energetic and hard-working group turned out to light up Heppner. Hot chocolate was provided at the Chamber office.

Our Main Street tree is comparable to Rockefeller Center's this year. Columbia Basin went all out with the biggest tree ever, complete with pinecones. Thinking it was too huge to light, Cliff Green provided spotlights at the base. Then a miracle (with lots of hard work again by Columbia Basin and Tom Rawlins, Heppner TV) 1800 lights and a star appeared. Give these guys a big pat on the back for lighting up Heppner.

More lighting to come... the residential and business lighting will be judged on Sunday, December 20. In the residential category, first and second place will be given for outdoor lighting; first and second for indoor lighting as viewed from the outside; and the equivalent to Peacock Lane will be named. Festive business lighting display will also be awarded.

Thought for the week: "If the world sometimes seems cold to you, kindle fires to warm it." Then make time to enjoy those fires you kindle in many forms.

Higher wheat prices likely

A leading West Coast wheat trader foresees the price of wheat slowly improving for Northwest growers.

Mark Pahnquist, senior vice president of the Grain Marketing Division of Cenex/Harvest Sates, told the Oregon Wheat Growers League Nov. 30 that he expects the supply-demand equation to begin to favor producers. Right now, there's more wheat than demand and prices have been very low.

"Quality" is one of the keys to farm improvement, he said. "Egypt is enthralled by our soft white wheat and is paying a premium of $8 a ton."

Pahnquist said the overall big world wide crop is plagued by quality problems, which gives local producers an advantage.

"Our biggest competitor this year is the European Union," he said, with lots of wheat and subsidies that help European farmers.

Donation programs to hungry nations help U. S. farmers, he said, so long as the wheat isn't sold back into the world market. Pahnquist said the Loan Deficiency Program "has been a godsend" to farmers.

Growers will see more vertical integration in wheat marketing, he predicted, as well as such horizontal integration as Cargill's purchase of Continental Grain.
