Assisted living seeks funding

Representatives of the Willow Creek Valley Assisted Living project met on Jan. 26 with the USDA Rural Housing specialist, Don Hollis, and state architect, Sam Hall. Also in attendance were Jim Rippey, consultant to the project, and representatives of local lending institutions.

The WCVL Board of Directors has requested a rural-housing loan of $680,000 from the U.S. Department of Agriculture and now awaits a decision from that agency. The estimated cost of the assisted-living project is $940,000. To complete the funding of the project, WCVL is applying for bank loans totalling $170,000 and must raise $90,000 through private donations.

On Main Street near the Shoe Box store, the "thermometer," presently reading $35,000, will reflect the progress of the drive for private donations. Individuals who wish to donate toward the building of the assisted living facility may do so by sending their support to "WCVL" at Box 244 in Heppner. Should they wish, they may donate with the proviso that their donations be refunded if the project does not go forward.

Another means of donating is provided by the Central Red

Apple through a collection box for grocery receipts. Central Market will contribute a percentage of the value of the deposited receipts.

By St. Patrick's Day weekend in Heppner, the WCVL Board plans to begin sales of bricks to interested supporters. The inscribed bricks will be displayed as a prominent feature of the assisted living facility.

As developments occur in this project, the board says it will continue to provide information to the community.
