Musicians begin campaign

Tuesday, September 19, began the 2000-2001 membership campaign for Inland Northwest Musicians. This group of musicians is made up of Inland Northwest Orchestra and Chorale and Willow Creek Symphony and led by R. Lee Friese, music director and conductor.

These musicians not only represent a wide expanse of age and varying ability levels, they represent the northeastern Oregon region. Members travel to weekly rehearsals in Pendleton from places as far away as Enterprise, Long Creek and Heppner.

"We're so fortunate to have this opportunity in rural Eastern Oregon," said concertmaster Alice Massey. "It's great to come together with friends to play music by the great composers. After all, true friends make the best music."

The opportunity is unique not only for musicians but for audiences who might not otherwise have a chance to hear live symphonic music in their own hometown. This season Inland Northwest Musicians performs in Prairie City, Boardman and Wallowa Lake, in addition to other sites for the 19-concert schedule.

Memberships in Inland Northwest Musicians, Inc. are now available. For the benefit of audiences in outlying communities, two categories of membership are available-the sustaining membership: adult $40, senior $25 or family $125, which entitles you to attend any concert in any location; or the $20 membership which entitles adults to two concerts of their choice plus a discounted price of $7 for any additional concerts. Seniors receive four concerts of their choice and a discounted price of $3 for additional concerts. All students 18 and under will receive free admission with ID card.

All memberships are included on the mailing list, are voting members of INWM, Inc., and receive a premiere edition Inland Northwest Musicians coffee mug.

To become a member; contact Lynnea Stanhope at 938-0645 or 966-6649, or Loren Unruh in Heppner at 676-9873.

Memberships may also be purchased from any musician or at the first concerts.

The second season for Inland Northwest Musicians debuts with performances in Milton-Freewater on Saturday, October 7, at McLaughlin High Auditorium; and Hermiston on Sunday November 8, at Hermiston Community Center.

Ticket prices for both concerts are adults - $10 and seniors $5, with students through age 18 admitted free.

For more information contact Stanhope at 938-0645 or 966-6649.

Boardman volunteers spruce up community

Armed with shovels, rakes and hoes, over 55 Boardman community volunteers competed in the 2000 Community Pride Challenge.

Starting at 8 am, Saturday September 9, volunteers prepared the new mini-park and landscaped the Welcome to Boardman Areas along the Boardman off ramps. Some planted trees and native shrubs, and arranged rocks for a retaining wall while others cleared the area for the planting of lawn.

Many volunteers took part just for the satisfaction of helping to enhance their communities appearance. Others enjoyed helping, but also relished the prospect of winning community pride financial awards for the most volunteer hours worked by a community non-profit organization.

Forty-four Our Lady of Guadalupe Catholic Church volunteers contributed 74 hours worked and won the first place $500 prize. Boy Scout Troop 602 contributed 12 hours to win the $125 second prize and Friends of the Library contributed nine hours to capture the $75 third prize.

Materials, labor and prize money were donated by supporting area businesses and community members.

The community enhancement project is held annually in September between Labor Day and the Round-Up and organized by the Boardman Community Development Association and The Boardman Chamber of Commerce.

Interim Boardman chamber director named

The Boardman Chamber of Commerce announces the appointment of Jackie McCauley as interim executive director for the chamber.

McCauley has served in the capacity of office coordinator and assistant to former director Carol Michael for the last seven months. Michael said she has decided to focus her attention to her family's business. She plans to continue her volunteer involvement in the community and Morrow County.

"We are grateful to have had the expertise and dedication to our community that Carol has given to Boardman and Morrow County for the past 2-1/2 years," said McCauley. The Boardman Chamber office will continue the programs that Carol implemented during her tenure. We are looking forward to serving the business community with the same level of excellence."
