THE NO ACTION ZONE
ARE YOU IN OR OUT?

The "No Action Zone" is the area outside the emergency zones around the Umatilla Chemical Depot. People in the Immediate Response Zone would have to protect themselves quickly if there were a chemical accident at the Depot, while people in the Protective Action Zone would have more time. But if you live, work or drive in the "No Action Zone," you are too far from the Depot and need to take "NO" action.

TAKE THIS EASY "NO ACTION ZONE" QUIZ.

True or false?

You're in Walla Walla or Milton-Freewater—too far away to be at risk—and there's a chemical accident at the Depot. But you want to help. You should wait for authorities to ask for assistance or volunteers.

True or false?

Time to pull out of LaGrande and head to the coast for vacation. Oh no—the radio says there's a chemical accident at the Depot. That means road closures! Quickly you decide you should stay home where you're safe.

True or false?

Life in Tri Cities is fine. Then—a neighbor says there's been a chemical accident at the Depot. You're safe, but want more information. You should tune into television, radio or Internet for emergency updates.

True or false?

You're in Heppner, Lexington or Ione. There's a chemical accident at the Depot. You know the local phone system could overload, but you want to check on a friend in Hermiston. You should stay off the phone unless it's life-threatening.

THE NO ACTION ZONE—are you in or out?

If you are in the "No Action Zone," you won't have to take protective action if there is a chemical accident at the Depot. You still should be prepared for any kind of emergency, but with regard to the Depot, your area is considered to be not at risk.

DID YOU PASS?

If you said all questions in the quiz are TRUE, slip yourself on the back—Woo-hoo—YOU ARE RIGHT!
