Siren testing to be conducted

Siren testing of individual sirens in the CSEPP outdoor warning system will be conducted November 14, 15 and 16 in order to help determine where additional new sirens will be placed, according to Chris Brown, Oregon State CSEPP manager. The tests will run intermittently from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. each day.

Jeff Whattam of SAFR Systems, a Richland, WA., engineering and communications firm, will be testing the acoustic propagation patterns of 13 sirens added or moved to new locations two years ago. The study will measure the acoustic range of each siren to determine where new units will be installed. Each siren is usually spaced about a mile apart but hilly terrain, heavy foliage or other obstacles may limit the range of a siren's wail.

Each siren will be turned on and off for a few seconds at a time to take acoustic readings. Residents should not be alarmed when they hear a siren start to wail.

The siren system can be activated from four different locations including the Morrow County 9-1-1 Center in Heppner, the Umatilla Chemical Depot Emergency Operations Center, the Hermiston Safety Center and the Umatilla County 9-1-1 center in Pendleton.

For more information on the CSEPP siren system, call 966-9640.
