Mustangs swept at Colfax

By Rick Paullus

The Heppner Mustang baseball team ran into a very tough Colfax Bulldog team and suffered their first losses of the season as they were swept 10-3 and 4-1 on Saturday, March 30, in Colfax. The Mustangs (5 and 2) will be at Wahtonka on Thursday, April 4, and will host the Eagles on Tuesday, April 9, at 4:30 p.m. to wrap up the non-league schedule.

The Mustangs started off well in the first game of the doubleheader as Stefan Matheny singled, Michael McCabe singled, Brad Adams had an rbi single and Billy Gates had a sacrifice fly to make it 2-0 after one.

The Bulldogs scored a run in the bottom of the second to make it 2-1, but the turning point in the game came in the third inning. The Mustangs load the bases with no outs but failed to score and the Bulldogs came back with five runs in the bottom half to take a 6-2 lead.

The Mustangs scored a run in the fourth as Josh Winters singled, went to second on a passed ball, moved to third on a Brian Gutierrez ground-out and scored as Matheny singled.

The Bulldogs added a run in the bottom of the fourth and added three more in the sixth on a three-run homerun.

Matheny led the way, going four for four with two doubles and an rbi. Gates went one for two with an rbi and McCabe went one for two.

Game two was a pitcher's duel as McCabe shut the Bulldogs out for three innings, then singled in the fourth, went to second on a passed ball and scored on Donald Adam's single. The Bulldogs came back with four runs in the bottom half to wrap up the scoring for the game.

Gates came in relief of McCabe and pitched two and two-thirds innings of scoreless ball.

Port of Portland director speaks to Port of Morrow

"The Port of Portland supports a Columbia-Snake river system in which commerce and fish are on equal footing. In addition to providing habitat for fish and wildlife, the Columbia-Snake offers commercial benefits of barging, rail and global marine shipping that ensures the millions of tons of goods moved on it each year don't end up having to be moved in ways that are less friendly to the environment, less efficient, or detrimental to the lives of the people who live, work and commute in this region."

Those are some of the key points that Port of Portland executive director Bill Wyatt was to make during his address at a meeting of river transportation stakeholders on Wed., April 3, at the Port of Morrow's Riverfront Center in Boardman, according to a Port of Morrow news release. The 7 p.m. dinner reception, co-hosted by the Port of Morrow and Vancouver, Wash.-based Tidewater Barge Lines, is billed as a "Shippers Appreciation Banquet." Wyatt plans to use the opportunity to introduce himself as the Port of Portland's new executive director and share with the audience his commitment to a healthy, economically vibrant river system.

According to the release, Wyatt plans to fulfill this commitment by moving forward on the project to deepen the lower Columbia navigation channel. Wyatt was to discuss how the proposed Columbia River Channel Improvement Project would have profound benefits for communities, businesses and individuals throughout the 465-mile-long river system, and beyond, said the release. The project would deepen the lower Columbia's 40-foot-shipping channel by three feet to accommodate today's larger ocean-going ships and provide a host of eco-system restoration measures to improve salmon habitat. Explaining the project's benefits and responding to stakeholders' concerns about it are among the many ways lower and upriver maritime interests are working together to keep the river system viable for multiple uses, said the Port of Morrow.

"When ports, transportation service providers, shippers and other river interests work together to communicate with the region's residents about the transportation benefits of this river system, it stimulates a better understanding of what it will take to ensure its longevity for people and wildlife," said Wyatt.
