Flood plain maps

The Federal Emergency Management Agency (FEMA) has a web site set up with the maps and there are also copies at Heppner City hall for the public to view. The web site is www.msc.fema.gov.

There is almost a year-long process to adopt the new flood maps, and they will not go into effect until at least October, 2007 Atkinson said.

Joe Webber, also from FEMA, said that if homeowners are now in the flood plain and feel they should not be, should hire a surveyor and determine the elevation of their property. If the property is above the designated flood plain level then they are not subject to the restrictions.

The process to examine the flood plain in the Willow Creek Valley began in April of 2004. The estimated water flows were considered too high, so the new study as instigated.
