NRCS announces local EQIP application cutoff

Local farmers and ranchers interested in financial and technical assistance for conservation measures on their working lands have until October 31 to apply for Environmental Quality Incentives Program (EQIP) funding for federal fiscal year 2008.

"EQIP is a voluntary conservation program to help farmers and ranchers improve and enhance the condition of water, soil, and other natural resources on private working lands," says Tom Bennett, District Conservationist. "The program is designed to help producers protect the resources that support their operations and contribute to environmental quality for the overall community."

The USDA-Natural Resources Conservation Service (NRCS) accepts applications for EQIP year-round. Funding decisions, however, are made at cutoff points during the year, with the current ranking period closing on October 31.

2008 Fair & OTPR Court applicants sought

Applications for the Morrow County Fair & Oregon Trail Pro Rodeo Court are now available at the fair office in Heppner.

Applicants must have a horse available from the time of tryouts until September 2008. Other requirements include being a resident of/or reside closely adjacent to Morrow County, between the ages of 16-21 by August 1 of the year in which the fair and rodeo will be held.

EOU announces 2006-07 graduates

Eastern Oregon University awarded a total of more than 800 bachelor's and master's degrees in the 2006-07 academic year. Graduates were formally recognized for their achievements at the Commencement Ceremony held on Saturday, June 16 at EOU.

Local graduates are as follows:

Patti Allstott, Heppner, B.S. Business Administration
 Clarissa Johnson, Heppner, B.S. Multidisciplinary Studies
 Olaf Pedersen, Heppner, B.S. Liberal Studies
 Gregory Smith, Heppner, M.B. Master's of Business Administration
 Kristina Powell, Ione, B.S. Mathematics
 Joseph Lindsay, Lexington, M.T. Master's in Teacher Education

Applications that address local conservation priorities are evaluated and ranked for funding. Priority applications may address issues like rangeland health with cross fences and livestock water, cropland erosion and soil and water quality with reduced tillage and improved nutrient management, water efficiency with improved irrigation systems and forest health with thinning or tree planting. Other issues and practices may also be eligible. The number of successful applications will be based on ranking and available funding.

Interested parties should contact the Heppner USDA-NRCS service center located at 430 Linden Way to apply.

For more information about EQIP, including local ranking information, enrollment requirements and program payments, visit the Oregon NRCS web site at: <http://www.or.nrcs.usda.gov>.

Applications must be received by 11 a.m. September 28 at the Fair Office.

Late applications will not be considered. Tryouts and interviews will be on October 14 in Heppner at the Fairgrounds.

For more information, call Fair Manager Ren'ee Yocum at 676-9474 or e-mail her at mcfair@co.morrow.or.us.

Meeting planned for Wee Bit O' Ireland 2008

It's time once again to start planning for Wee Bit O' Ireland 2008. The first meeting will be held Tuesday, September 18 at 7 p.m. at Heppner City Hall.

Anyone wishing to participate in planning this event can call Terry Baker who will be the 2008 Chairman, at 676-5536. New volunteers as well as new ideas are welcome. The celebration needs an infusion of fresh events to keep the public from getting bored.

Anyone hesitant to volunteer because of a busy schedule can be assured that work will be divided according to what people can reasonably handle.

Pizza will be served at each meeting for the volunteers.

OHSU wants your spiders, dead or alive

Oregon Poison Center aims to determine which northwest spiders bite

The Oregon Poison Center at Oregon Health & Science University hopes to better understand spider bites in the Northwest by determining which spiders bite, which cause skin loss (ulcers), and specifically whether the much-maligned hobo spider does either.

Spider bites have been the subject of much folklore in medicine, but evidence directly linking spider bites to ulceration or infection is thin. Often a person will see a red mark on their skin, see a spider nearby, and attribute the mark to the spider.

The Northwest native hobo spider has been implicated as a source of ulcers and skin infections for many years. Its venom has been demonstrated to cause tissue death when injected into the skin of animals, but there is debate about whether the spider ever bites or is even capable of biting humans.

"There isn't a single documented case of actually seeing a hobo spider bite a human that resulted in ulceration," said Rob Hendrickson, M.D., study principal investigator, associate professor of emergency medicine and medical toxicologist. "However, the hobo spider has been presumed to be the only spider in the Northwest capable of causing ulceration."

The Oregon Poison Center currently takes about 1,200 calls a year from Oregonians concerned about possible spider bites. The center has decided to take the next step by asking all Oregonians who actually see a spider bite them to call 800-222-1222. Poison center staff will offer medical advice as usual and then make follow-up calls during the next several weeks to check for signs of ulceration and infection. The caller also will be sent a postage-paid package in which to send the spider to the poison center.

"We understand not everyone will feel comfortable killing the spider, and we won't pressure them to do so, but we would still like to hear about the spider bite," said Nathanael McKeown, D.O., study co-investigator, instructor in emergency medicine and fellow in medical toxicology, OHSU.

All spiders collected will be sent to a local expert in identifying Northwest spiders. The species of spider will be linked with the description of the lesion to determine which spiders bite.

The Oregon Poison Center can be reached at 800-222-1222.

HHS Class of '67 hold reunion

Heppner High School's Class of 1967 held their 40th reunion in Redmond at the home of Dennis and Peggy O'Donnell on August 17, 18, and 19.

Friday night was spent eating pizza and renewing old friendships. Classmates roasted Rick Johnston on getting the 2A Coach of the Year. Classmates also watched a DVD of various class pictures made by Peggy O'Donnell. A special remembrance was held for deceased classmates Linda Warren, Marsha Sowell Sweek, and Jeff Turner.

On Saturday morning some of the classmates went golfing. Jim Lieuallen was the overall winner. In the evening a dinner was held at Eagle Crest followed by karaoke and more visiting at the O'Donnell's.

A brunch was held on Sunday morning before everyone headed home.

The class voted to have another reunion in five years. The reunion will be hosted by Marty and Jim
