Oregon Reads 2009 begins

What if every Oregonian read the same book for our state's 150th anniversary? In honor of Oregon's Sesquicentennial, Oregon libraries are collaborating on Oregon Reads 2009, the first statewide community reading project.

Oregonians are invited to read Stubborn Twig by Lauren Kessler. Stubborn Twig is the true story of three generations of a Japanese American family who settled in Hood River. The book explores the American identity through the real stories of people who lived through the events surrounding the attack on Pearl Harbor and life afterwards.

Children can participate in Oregon Reads too by reading Bat 6 by Virginia Euwer Wolff or Apples to Oregon by Deborah Hopkins. Apples to Oregon is an original tall tale recounting the journey from Iowa to Oregon of Delicious and her family—and their apple trees.

There are many copies of Stubborn Twig available at each library. It is also available to download through Library to Go on the website. An online book discussion group and booklists for other books related to the theme will be available via the library website at www.oregon-trail.plinkit.org.
