

GOVERNOR

not meet with members of the minority Republican Party. "As governor I would meet with people. I would spend some time outside Salem," he said he would make it a point to meet with local people in every county every year if he were elected.

In response to a question from the audience Dudley said it's time to reign in the size of government. "It has just grown too big. It is not sustainable. We have to create jobs in the private sector."

On the tax system Dudley, who has been a financial planner in Portland since retiring from basketball in 2003, said he opposed measures 66 and 67 that raised taxes on businesses and individuals, and that he is also opposed to doing away with the kicker, where Oregonians get back tax money not anticipated by the government. "The kicker is the last restraint on spending," he said. "Government has to show it can restrain itself." He said Salem needs to prove itself to the people that it can be responsible with money. "We need to put real dollars aside when things are good in anticipation of the bad times. We need to address the spending side first," he said before the state should look at changing the tax structure.

On the national health care plan recently passed by Congress and signed by the president, Dudley said if he were governor he would have the attorney general "look into" joining other states in filing a lawsuit against the health care reform bill.

On the national forest he said government needs "common sense" in regulation of the forests. He said there was a lot of waste in the way the forests are now managed. In his literature he says he would "...re-focus state policies to support, not stand in the way of, sustainable natural resource industries in agriculture and ranching, timber and forest products..."

On Oregon land use laws, he said there needs to be more local input and support efforts to provide rural areas "greater flexibility for growth."

On the Business Energy Tax Credit (BETC) that has been used by so many wind farms in Or-gon, Dudley says the way the credit is designed it "has not been good for state government." "Why are we giving away $10 million that went to businesses that went broke?" he asked. He said the program has not been managed properly. He said there should have been a cap placed on the amount of tax credit wind farms could receive.

In response to a question about unequal amounts of water Oregon and Washington are drawing from the Columbia River, Dudley said it needs to be equal. "Since 1992 Oregon has been restricted on the amount of water we can take out of the Columbia River," Port of Morrow Manager Gary Neal told Dudley. "Washington is getting a lot more water out of the river. Washington should not be under a different set of rules than Oregon," Neal said. "I think it should be equal on both sides of the river," Dudley said.

He said he was also opposed to the federal cap and trade legislation working through Congress. "Energy is very important to our region," Neal told Dudley.

Dudley, who lives in Portland with his wife and three children, says a defining moment in his life was in 1975 when he was 10 years old. Every morning he would raise the American flag with his grandfather and say the Pledge of Allegiance. "My grandfather would tell me how fortunate we were to live in this great country," Dudley said.

Despite Oregon's

problems Dudley says he is optimistic. "I am optimistic about our future. Now is the time for change. This is the right time for someone outside of politics," he says of his candidacy.
