Elinor Elizabeth Cohn Shank

Elinor Elizabeth Cohn Shank passed away on February 17, 2011.

She was born in Portland, Oregon on July 14, 1910 to the late Philip and Henrietta Cohn; and was the sister of the late Harold A. and Henry P. Cohn each of Heppner, Oregon.

Elinor grew up in Heppner and moved to Portland in 1924 where she graduated from Grant High School. She attended Oregon Normal school in Monmouth, Oregon, and later taught kindergarten at the Neighborhood House, in Portland. She married her late husband, Edward A. Shank, and from 1937-1958, Elinor and Ted lived in Coos Bay, Oregon, where they owned the Buster Brown Shoe Store, and the Oregon Woolen Stores, mens' retail clothing stores, located in Coos Bay and Klamath Falls. In 1958 they returned to Portland, where Elinor remained until her death.

Elinor dedicated her life to community service, political causes, the written word, and regular exercise. She was one of the original founders of the Coos Bay chapter of the League of Women Voters, and was fortunate to sit next to Martin Luther King at a National Urban League dinner meeting in Portland. Her profound writing skills in an OpEd piece to Time Magazine garnered a coveted letter from the First Lady, Eleanor Roosevelt. In the late sixties, Elinor served as a staff member in the New Careers program, a poverty program funded by the Office of Equal Opportunity, under the aegis of the Department of labor.

Among her other affiliations were women's organizations; B'nai B'rith Women, the Business and Professional Women, and Second Harvest Food Bank.

Elinor also owned and operated a retail antique shop. She wrote numerous short stories on food and travel, and with accreditation from Portland State University, she tutored English as a second language to visiting foreign university students.

In the winter of 1990, Elinor Shank authored an early childhood memoir, Looking Back at Heppner, that was published in the Oregon Historical Quarterly. In 2009, she was chosen from hundreds of people to chronicle her life story in an interview with her granddaughter, Mary Shank Rockman, for StoryCorps, The Conversation of a Lifetime, presented by National Public Radio. Her interview is housed in the Library of Congress.

Elinor was lover of traveling and jazz music. She once traveled on a jazz cruise with Dizzy Gillespie and his wife whose acquaintance she cherished for many years afterward. She was an avid collector of art, loved fashion, gardening, and word games. In fact, she was a formidable opponent of high-scoring Scrabble games. Her active lifestyle was an inspiration to all who knew her, including thrice weekly workouts until just a few months before she passed. She will be missed greatly.

Elinor is survived by: her loving son, Joseph Shank of San Jose California; daughter, Jayne Cookson of Eugene, Oregon; grandchildren, Cathi Cookson Rothman of Hudson, Ohio, Ted Cookson of Cairo, Egypt, and Mary Shank Rockman and Molly Seitel of San Francisco, California; and four great-grandchildren Heather Rothman of New York City, and Nathan and Noah Rockman, and Sofie Seitel of San Francisco, CA.
