Auxiliary provides Memorial Day flags

The Heppner cemetery looked beautiful over Memorial Day weekend this year, with beautiful flowers and flags waving in the wind.

Hoping to make this an annual event, the ladies of The American Legion Auxiliary, with the help from some local people, placed more than 180 flags on the graves of veterans.

Auxiliary members offer apologies if any graves were missed, an unintentional oversight, but say that highlights the need for community involvement.

Since there is no list of area veterans' names and grave locations, the only way currently to locate veterans' graves is to walk the cemetery and read each stone. Anyone who had a loved one missed in the process and who would like a flag in the future is asked to give the Auxiliary the name so they can place a flag next year or provide flags for individuals to place themselves.

The Auxiliary also is compiling a list of names for reference for next year and needs the community's help in doing so. Call 541-676-9483 to give information; if no answer, leave a message.

Army of volunteers for park project

An "army of volunteers" might be a figure of speech most of the time, but not in this case. Heppner's Hager Park is getting a much-needed sprucing-up thanks to a visit from the Army National Guard this week. Sixty members of the 234th Engineer Company of the Oregon Army National Guard are in town through June 28, working to give the park a new face. They are assisting in erecting a new picnic pavilion, play gym and swing set, as well as placing picnic tables made by Dave Fowler's class at Heppner High School. The Guard members will also install new barbecue grills if they arrive in time. —Photo by Andrea Di Salvo
