A trip to remember

By Kathy Tellechea

Shirley Rugg invited me and some other friends on her annual camping trip. This year the trip was to the Steens Mountains in southern Oregon. Accompanying her this year were Sibbea Browning from Heppner, Tom and Cheryl Berry from Prairie City, OR and myself, Kathy Tellechea from Lexington.

We loaded horses and were on the road by 8 a.m. Wednesday, August 1. We met up with the Berrys in John Day and then continued on to the Steens, arriving in mid-afternoon. We saw the South Steens Hollywood herd of wild horses around a waterhole. Shirley stopped, and Sibbea and I hiked out to photograph the herd. It was hot, the grass is sparse and the water is drying up. So far the herd is in pretty good shape, but rain is needed.

We continued on to the South Steens campground. Set up camp and settled in for the night after a dinner of chicken and potato salad. The next day, we rode the Little Blitzen Trail. The country is breathtaking. Hamburgers were grilled for dinner. We all pitched in and helped with preparations and cleanup.

The following day we rode the Little Indian Canyon. This area is where my late husband John Tellechea came on a contract to herd sheep in 1964. In 1970, Shirley went to French Glen to purchase a band of sheep and John came with her to be sheep foreman for her.

Seeing the kind of country where John first herded gave everyone a new respect for all the Basque herders who came to that area to carve out a new life for themselves. It is rugged and unforgiving... Aspen trees along the way are carved with the different herders' names, and some told tales of hardship and loneliness.

Arriving back at camp, after dinner of chicken wraps, the Berrys loaded up and returned home. We went back to spend time with the wild horses and took many photographs. That herd of wild horses has stolen my heart.

Saturday found us breaking camp and heading to the top of the Steens. We stopped where John lies at rest, a time to say hello and goodbye. I have been there numerous times since he passed and, each time, a lone golden eagle stands by watching.

We continued on to French Glen, where we had lunch and did a little shopping in the General Store. We stopped in Burns to visit Agustin and Juanita Andueza. He also herded for Shirley some 40 years ago.

We arrived home filled with great memories. A trip none of us will ever forget....

Drug investigation leads to arrests

Multi-agency drug investigation leads to multiple arrests and drugs and firearm seizures in northeast Oregon

A one-year investigation into drug and firearm trafficking in Oregon and southeast Washington led to the arrest last week of 29 people. The arrests followed the execution of multiple search warrants by a large team of federal, state, and local law enforcement agencies, according to a release by the Blue Mountain Enforcement Narcotics Team (BENT). The investigation is ongoing and the names of those arrested will be released later to prevent any impact to the ongoing operation.

According to Pendleton

Police Chief Stuart Roberts, Board Chair of BENT, early on the morning of August 2, approximately 110 law enforcement officers from federal, state, and local agencies moved throughout northeast Oregon and southeast Washington to begin serving 27 search warrants on residences, a storage locker and vehicles. The multi-agency operation also sought to arrest several suspects with outstanding warrants related to the one-year investigation. Officers also were contacting at least 30 other locations.

The investigation aims to dismantle a Drug Trafficking Organization (DTO) that has been operating in Umatilla, Morrow, and Union counties, as well as southeast Washington and southern Oregon.

As of Thursday afternoon, law enforcement officers seized 6.5 pounds of methamphetamine, 1/2 ounce heroin, nearly 800 prescription medication pills, 23 pounds of processed marijuana, approximately 200 marijuana plants, four indoor marijuana grow sites, 11 handguns, one silencer, and 10 long barrel firearms, including one assault rifle and one shotgun.

The Morrow County Sheriff's Office was one of several agencies involved in the operation. Others involved included BENT, several regional city and county police departments, Umatilla tribal police, Oregon State Police, U.S. Marshals, the U.S. Attorney's Office, the Oregon Department of Justice and the Department of Human Services, among others.
