The blues are back at lone celebration

The blues are back this year at Lone's Red, White and Blues celebration July 4, but this time with a rocking twist to the theme.

Taking the stage right after the talent show, around 4:30 p.m., is all-female alternative rock band She's Not Dead. Based out of Portland, OR, She's Not Dead offers hot original music as well as covers from Joan Jett, AC/DC, The Bangles, Green Day, The Go-Go's, and more.

The group is formed around two core members, songwriter, lead singer and lead guitar Kira Nesser and drummer Sam Howell. They are joined by Sara Taylor on keyboard and Kat HellBender on bass. They says the, together, they are "four hot chicks who will rock your face off."

Next up will be Rhythm Culture, a reggae band also out of Portland. Led by Byron Mercurius of Guyana, South America, Rhythm Culture features guitar, bass, keyboards, drums and trumpet with four to five core musicians who represent a variety of age groups and different backgrounds. Combining their individual influences of the Caribbean and the Americas, and using a roots reggae foundation, the band infuses blues and jazz into their brand of Reggae music, guaranteed, they say, "to get even the most reluctant of dancers out of their chairs."

Rounding out the evening is rhythm and blues band Lloyd Jones Struggle. With roots in Portland, Jones has recorded six critically acclaimed albums, toured internationally, and racked up dozens of major awards and accolades. He calls himself a "relentless road dog," playing his "swampy blues, his backporch picking, his serious-as-anthrax funk, soul, roadhouse two-beats, and old-school rhythm and blues" all over the country. Lone's celebration will feature the full band, including Jones, lead guitar and vocals, Mark Griffith, drums, Denny Bixby, bass and vocals, and Dover Weinberg, keyboards and backing vocals.

Bed races back on the schedule for Fourth of July

Ione is bringing back bed races for the Fourth of July celebration.

This activity was one of the first activities included in Lone's annual celebration when it started 30-some years ago.

It has been out of the mix for several years now but, through persistence by die-hard fans, the event has had a comeback.

The bed races will be held on Main Street in Lone immediately following the parade.

Teams of five—four runners and one rider—are invited to sign up by July 3 to participate.

Event planners say any kind of bed will do—twin, full, queen, cribs and even homemade from 2x4s.

However, all beds must be in a rectangle type shape to resemble the shape of a bed and have four wheels designed to be on the ground surface at all times.

To register and for a complete list of rules, contact Deacon Heideman at 541-701-7600 or at deacon.h@hotmail.com, or visit <http://www.scribd.com/doc/229478413/BedRaceFlyer-and-Race-Rules> for more information.

Young Entrepreneurs Business Week summer programs open for enrollment for Morrow County students Program sponsorships are currently available to Irrigon, Riverside and Heppner high school students

PORTLAND, OR—Young Entrepreneurs Business Week (YEBW) summer 2014 business education programs for high school students are now open for enrollment.

YEBW is a nonprofit organization that provides business education for high school students in Oregon and from around the world through immersive week-long programs available at the University of Portland (July 20-26), Oregon State University (July 27- Aug. 2) and the University of Oregon (Aug. 10-16).

YEBW currently has a limited number of program subsidies and sponsorships available for interested students from Morrow County high schools. The sponsorships and subsidies are made possible by the Tillamook County Creamery Association. For more information, contact YEBW at 503-576-4871 or visit www.yebw.org.

YEBW's Business Week is designed for high school students with an interest in business, career preparation, leadership development and college exposure. Participants in the program will spend one week on a college campus being exposed to a curriculum designed to provide them with the financial literacy, business fundamentals and tools they need to build confidence and be successful in school, work and life.

"Our core mission is to build and prepare the next generation of business and community leaders in Oregon and beyond," said

Executive Director Gregg Mindt. "We already have more than 275 students enrolled in this summer's programs, including five students joining us from Pakistan. In past years we've had students from several different countries participate as well as from all over the United States."

During the programs, students are broken up into student-led companies, each of which is guided by a loaned executive from the business community who shares their knowledge and expertise throughout the week. In the mock companies students create management teams, develop mission statements, invent a product, and conduct the actual operation of their own business by competing in business simulations. The programming also incorporates professional speakers and other interactive learning exercises such as mock interviews and networking events.

Tuition for YEBW's Business Week is $795 for in-state residents and $1295 for out-of-state residents. The tuition price excludes transportation but includes all other accommodations. Corporate sponsorships are available on a limited basis for Oregon and SW Washington residents. YEBW says its goal is to ensure that every student can attend regardless of financial situation.
