IONE GRAND MARSHAL

going on to obtain a Bachelor of Science in education from Eastern Oregon College (now Eastern Oregon University) in 1952. After obtaining her degree, she taught in Pendleton for a year before her life took an unexpected turn. While skiing in the Spout Springs area, she met an lone farm boy named Bob Rietmann, an avid skier like herself. They hit it off and were married in September of 1953. "Right after harvest," she says. The young couple lived for a year in lone and then moved onto the family homestead on Ella Lane outside of lone. For the next several years, Rietmann's life would revolve around the seasons of farm and family as she raised their three sons, John, Joe and Jerry, and cooked for big harvest crews. "Those were the days when the whole crew would come into the house for lunch, and I would make them a big meal," she recalls. "Sometimes I had men in the bunkhouses, and they got three meals a day." During that time, she says the family also enjoyed family activities, including skiing; their sons all learned to love the sport in their own right, and the Rietmann's enjoyed many family outings to the ski slope. It was in 1968 that her life took another turn into involvement with the larger community. Rietmann says she had not done any work with the lone school, but that didn't stop her from receiving a call one August day. "The principal called me and said, 'We could not find a suitable first-grade teacher. Would you be able to teach for one year?' We talked it over, and I finally agreed," she says. "One year turned into 35."

Thirty-five years in education might have been enough for many people, but the year she retired from teaching, Creative Care Preschool in lone needed a teacher and manager/administrator. Rietmann ended up taking that half-day position as a "retirement job." She retired this year after 13 years with the preschool. "I'm officially retired this time around," Rietmann says. Her life hasn't been all farm and school, however. According to Fourth of July committee member Betty Gray, Rietmann was chosen as Fourth of July grand marshal because of her community involvement... and she has been involved. Aside from her involvement in the school, Rietmann has been active in lone Community Church, in which she has held several offices and taught Sunday School. She has also been a member of the lone Topic Club, which, until three years ago, had been in charge of the lone library for the previous 80 years. "That was a big responsibility," she says. She is also a member of the lone American Legion Auxiliary and, until recently, a member of the Blue Mountain Community College Foundation Board, the group that is responsible for BMCC scholarships. She also has a long history of involvement in the Fourth of July celebration itself. "My husband was a retired veteran from World War II, and they were the ones who started the fireworks and the whole family celebration," says Rietmann, "so we were always involved that way. Two of my sons still help shoot the fireworks off, because that was something Bob did for years and years." And, through it all, she even found time for a few hobbies; she golfed for many years, and she says traveling has always been a big part of her life. She and Bob traveled to Europe several times. When he passed away a little more than 20 years ago, she continued to travel with grandchildren, experiencing places as diverse as China and England, not to mention destinations throughout the U.S. "People ask me if I plan to travel," she says. "I tell them that's what I've been doing, so I guess I'll continue." Now, though, she says she's excited to receive an honor so close to home, in the community where her three sons and several of her seven grandchildren still live. "I was so surprised," she says. "It was one of the biggest surprises of my life. I'm so honored. I'm so excited." During the parade, Rietmann says she plans on riding in a family pick-up the Rietmanns purchased in 1952. Her son, John, later restored the pickup and painted it in lone's school colors, and his children drove it to school during their high-school years. Riding with her will be one of her grandsons and a great-grandson, while her five granddaughters will walk beside the pickup. The parade will take place at 1 p.m. on lone's Main Street on Saturday, July 4. And in the crowd, Rietmann expects to see many familiar faces. "People say, 'How come you taught school so long?' I say, 'I taught young children, and they're such a joy to be around,'" she recalls. "It's been so nice to keep in touch with families around town." "I still know the families and their kids, and that's fun. It's been a blessing to me."
