New scam targets locals

Local residents have reported a new scam circulating in an attempt to separate people from their money.

The Gazette was informed this week that some Heppner residents were targeted by an internet scam involving fraudulent bills, bills that seemed to be owed to local businesses with whom they do business. The scam included an online "check" they could have filled out to pay the supposed bills, with amounts totaling about $9,000.

Those reporting the scam said they didn't lose any money, but wanted to make others aware of the danger.

Ione holds annual inauguration

Bryce Rollins of Ione plays the role of Chief Justice John Roberts as he administers the Presidential oath of office to Kalvin Rietmann, who played the role of President-elect Donald Trump during Ione's pre-enactment of the inauguration last Thursday. Other Ione students also filled in to play special roles in the event, including Alexandra Cavan as first lady Melania Trump, Cameron Proudfoot as Vice President-elect Mike Pence and John McElligott as House Speaker Paul Ryan. Students also represented local officials like Ione mayor Rod Taylor and Morrow County Judge Melissa Lindsey. The kindergarten, first- and second-grade classes sang "You're a Grand Old Flag," and students marched through the gym. The event ended with a mock "inaugural ball." Ione has held a mock inauguration, as well as a mock election, for more than 20 years as a way to teach students about the political process. -Contributed photo
