MORGAN HARVEST HELPERS

made, fields were assigned and lists were made of who would harvest which fields as the seed of an idea turned into a well-oiled harvest machine. Ione Market also came on board to provide ice and water, while Bank of Eastern Oregon donated food money to feed the harvest crew.

When the day came, the turn-out was extraordinary. Around 50 volunteers arrived to begin work at 7 a.m. on Sunday. Some worked the grain elevators in Ione and North Lex, while others ran the 12 combines, eight bank-out wagons and 22 trucks that rolled in to get the job done. And done it was—as the volunteers finished each field, they joined those still working until, by 5 p.m., the Morgan's entire wheat harvest was in.

"We did about three weeks' worth of work in one day," says LaRue.

"We cannot express our appreciation to the crews that helped make the Morgan Harvest such a success," the Morgan family stated in a thank-you to the community. "Having the harvest in the 'bin' has given us so much relief and allowed us the time to be in Texas to give our son, daughter in-law and granddaughters the support they need."

The community is also planning to extend the helping hand to Karl and Larissa Morgan in Texas; see related story PAGE TWO.

Adolescent well care exams help ensure healthy kids

Submitted by the Community Health Improvement Partnership of Morrow County.

Physical, social and emotional changes during adolescence increase the need for continuous, comprehensive preventive health services. Adolescents are laying the foundation for lifestyle and behaviors that persist into adulthood; half of lifetime cases of mental health disorders begin showing symptoms by age 14.

Adolescents who can easily access preventive health services are more likely to be healthy and able to reach major life milestones. The American Medical Association's Guidelines for Adolescent Preventive Services, the federal Bright Futures guidelines, and the American Academy of Pediatrics all recommend comprehensive annual check-ups for adolescents.

During an adolescent well care exam, the provider conducts a risk and strength assessment, listens to parent and youth concerns, conducts necessary screening and provides guidance on key health promotion priorities such as healthy weight, nutrition and physical activity, mental health, safety and injury prevention, and oral health. However, research shows most adolescents have not had a well-visit in the past year.

Schedule an adolescent well care (AWC) exam today for kids age 11-21. Call Pioneer Memorial Clinic, Heppner, 541-676-5504; Ione Community Clinic, 541-422-7128; Irrigon Medical Clinic, 541-922-5880; or Columbia River Community Health Services, Boardman, 541-481-7212.
