or one shared lagoon. Lexington council members all agreed that sharing costs would be beneficial for all three cities and would like to participate.

Representatives from the Rebekah Lodge attended the meeting to finalize an agreement on utilities for the Freedom Park. Council members all agreed that the proposal stating the lodge would be responsible for the electricity to run the sprinklers and the base amount of the water bill, with the city paying any water overage amounts, was acceptable. Everyone commented on how inviting the park looks and that it looks more like a park since the sign has been moved out near the street.

Ed Dickenson, city maintenance manager, and Janette Eldrige, city recorder, reported that the back flow testing has been done. Notices have been sent to residents that are in violation letting them know that their water will be shut off if the necessary repairs are not completed by a certain date.

There was further discussion regarding needing dirt for the FEMA park so grass can be planted. A workday for doing the prep work in the park was scheduled for 2 p.m. on Oct. 22. Everyone is invited to bring their rakes and shovels to help get everything done before winter.
