Vaping has reached a crisis stage and must be stopped

A message from the executive director of the National Federation of State High School Associations

Reprinted from September 11, 2019 by OSAAtoday Staff, OSAAtoday
By Dr. Karissa L. Niehoff, NFHS Executive Director

The issue of vaping has reached a crisis stage across the United States, and leaders in our nation's schools must take immediate steps to stop the use of these electronic cigarette products by our nation's youth – particularly the more than 12 million participants in high school athletics and performing arts programs.

On Tuesday, CBS News reported that Kansas health officials confirmed the first death in that state linked to vaping. The CBS News release stated that last week, officials in Indiana, California and Minnesota reported deaths in their states linked to vaping. Previous deaths had been reported in Illinois and Oregon.

Yesterday, the Associated Press reported that public health officials confirmed two people in Idaho had developed a serious lung disease linked to vaping. The outbreak of vaping-related lung disease has sickened about 450 people in at least 33 states, according to the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC), causing the CDC to urge people to consider stopping vaping as the number of cases of severe lung illnesses continues to rise.

In February 2019, the CDC reported a 78 percent increase in high school students vaping from 2017 to 2018. Youth e-cigarette use has been called an epidemic by major public health officials.

Students in our nation's schools have been sold a false bill of goods that vaping is a safe alternative to cigarette smoking – particularly by industry giant JUUL, which held a 76 percent share of the e-cigarette market at the end of 2018 and has wooed the youth market with its products that contain flavors such as cotton candy, chocolate, gummy bear, strawberry and many others.

While the U.S. Food and Drug Administration (FDA) is giving e-cigarette companies until sometime next year to demonstrate that their products can help people stop smoking cigarettes, leaders in our nation's school activities programs must do everything possible to stop the use of these products by our nation's youth now – not in with indoor and outdoor vendors, free face-painting and activities for children in the Kids' Corner, mule-drawn wagon rides, photo booth, beer and wine, and so much more. The goal is to bring the entire community together for a day of celebrating local artisans, produce, and family fun.

2020. One educational tool that schools can use immediately is the online course "Understanding Vaping and E-Cigarettes" created by the NFHS with support from the Office of the U.S. Surgeon General. The free course is available on the NFHS Learning Center at www.NFHSLearn.com.

Several articles related to vaping will appear in the September issue of High School Today, which will be posted this week on the NFHS website (www.NFHS.org).

Dr. Karissa L. Niehoff is beginning her second year as executive director of the National Federation of State High School Associations (NFHS) in Indianapolis, Indiana. She is the first female to head the national leadership organization for high school athletics and performing arts activities and the sixth full-time executive director of the NFHS, which celebrated its 100th year of service during the 2018-19 school year. She previously was executive director of the Connecticut Association of Schools-Connecticut Interscholastic Athletic Conference for seven years.
