EDUCATION MADE MORE PRACTICAL.

This is a season more than any other when educational matters are brought more forcibly before the public mind. Eighth graders are taking the examinations and in many of the schools in this section special exercises will be held and diplomas presented to those who have wrestled with the common branches through eight years and shown a degree of proficiency in these subjects satisfactory to their teachers and the officers in charge of educational matters both in the county and the commonwealth.

The high schools which have been established in the different counties and populous centers will each hold their graduation program consisting of exercises lasting through a period of several days and from each will step out a "company" of young people who have stuck to the work for an additional four years. Young men and young women better fitted to grapple with life's problems and master some special line of work which may be congenial to their tastes. Then too, comes the college, the university and the technical and trades school graduates, an ever increasing number who have gone still farther in their search for learning and wisdom, burned the midnight oil and struggled sometimes even against poverty and failing health to prepare themselves the better to meet the great problems of life and fit themselves to be masters in their special line of work. All these evidences are encouraging to others to stick to their courses until they finish or to attempt higher things. Parents are encouraged to give their children the advantages and honors which they see others are enjoying and a stronger desire wells up in the popular breast to make more of life and its opportunities.

When we look at all these things we sometimes wonder what it all amounts to and some say our schools do not train right. No doubt there is some room for criticism if some of our educational methods, but we must remember that these methods are the product only of human ingenuity and human skill and this is never perfect. Our educators and philosophers have studied and restudied our school system. They have experimented and tried scheme upon scheme and often have not agreed upon any uniform policy, but with all this thinking and experimenting and planning and working there is arising a system which bids fair to outshine anything ever attempted in the past.

There is a growing tendency to make all education more practical. To train the child even in the lower grades to use the eye and hand as well as the mind; to cram less and teach the child to think and see and feel the beauty of nature and develop the latent skill hidden away in the little intellect and the chubby hand. More teachers are being fitted to give practical instruction in gardening, farming, stockraising, cooking, sewing and various phases of manual training. These courses are either being incorporated into the every day work of the pupil or they are being taught separately as rapidly as means, equipment, room and teachers can be found to carry on the work. Great emphasis is now being laid on this class of work in the public schools both East and West, and we believe that the day is not far distant when the graduates of our common schools will receive not simply a diploma which stands for classical learning but a diploma which represents a broad and efficient training which will give the youth of our land confidence in themselves and skill to undertake the practical problems of every day life.

What is education for if it will not fit the youth for the common duties? Our girls must be trained in home making if we are to have homes in this beautiful land of ours. Our boys must be taught not only science and mathematics and history but those things which round out the character and cause them to take an interest in every day life, in beautifying their surroundings, using spare time from other employment to make people happier and their own lives more unselfish and useful to humanity. Educational thoughts are deep thoughts. We should dwell on them more and try to solve the needs in our own mind. We live for the future, for posterity and the perpetuation of and development of and perfection of all that is high and noble and beautiful in the character of the coming man and the working out of the creator's plan in making man the highest endowed creature on the face of this earth.

RAILROADS MUST IMPROVE.

The Oregon Railroad Commission, which has been investigating the causes of the recent wrecks on the O. W. P. abseconclnded ahtr rod O. W. P. has concluded that the wrecks would have been avoided by the use of the automatic block system and has recommended to the railway company that it install at once these safety appliances. The company is asked to state whether it will do this on the recommendation of the commission. The hint is strongly made that if the company refuses or delays they will be ordered to install the safety signals.

The line is evidently in need of general repairs. It is difficult to keep one's seat at times and the shaking up is considerable if a car is running at ordinarily fair speed between Gresham and Lents Junction.

GOOD ADVICE.

"Smile, and do not take too seriously the comment made by citizens. When one enters public service he or she must be prepared to take criticism."

This was good advice sent by the attorney-general of Kansas to a woman mayor in that state who complained of being criticized.

The May number of Better Fruit contains much information for the rose grower and home gardener. A look at this beautiful magazine makes one want to care for flowers and fruit. It also tells you how to do it. This one is the Rose Festival number.

You and your children are safe if you wear Dr. Lowe's glasses—eye safe and price safe.

MONEY IN IT

Edited by Rev. F. M. Burtch.

It is a lamentable thing, yet nevertheless true, that we as a people do not do things because it is right to do them, but must first be shown that it will pay. Our great civil war came upon us not as a righteous attempt to break the fetters of the slave, but as a difference of opinion in regard tonational policy. The south believed that secession was necessary to its own prosperity, the north believed that such an action endangered the welfare of the entire nation.

The Spanish American war came to pass, not on the ground of any inhumanity or cruelty exercised by Spain toward her subjects in Cuba, but only when the excuse could be made by our government, that conditions around that island had become a menace to our commerce and trade relations.

In like manner, the manhood our country has rallied and by means of the ballot is steadily wiping off the face of our map its greatest stain, the liquor traffic, not because one hundred thousand men of our best brain and blood were yearly filling drunkard's graves, nor yet because of homes were yearly wrecked through drink, it was discovered that prohibition pays large dividends in dollars and cents.

Men who have been the non-producers of the community become under prohibition, prosperous producers. Merchants who have been obliged to carry many "bad accounts" find to their surprise that the delinquents begin to make good; men who have been in the habit of squandering the larger part of their earnings for drink, begin to carry home larger parcels of groceries and clothing for the benefit of the family.

Men who have been filling the jails and county houses are able to take their places as respectable citizens, owning property and paying taxes. Cost of prosecution of criminals and of maintenance of criminals, paupers and the insane is reduced to an extent that is soon appreciable to the taxpayer. The plague spots of the town are replaced by clean thriving industries, and the investors come by dozens where before they came singly.

What is the moral? Simply this—There is nothing too good for Gresham. Let us strive for the thing that is right if possible, but at least for the thing that "pays."

A RADICAL.

I am accused of being a radical. If I seek to go to the root is a radical, a radical I am. After all everything that flowers in beauty in the air of heaven draws its fairness, its vigor, from its roots. Nothing living can blossom into fruitage unless through nourishing stalks deep planted in the common soil. Up from the silent bosom of the earth, rise the currents of life and energy. Up from the common soil, up from the quiet heart of the people, rise joyously today streams of hope and determination bound to renew the face of the earth in glory.

I tell you the so called radicalism of our times is simply the effort of nature to release the generous energies of our people. This great American people is at bottom just, virtuous and hopeful. The roots of its being are in the soil of what is lovely, pure and of good report, and the need of the hour is just that radicalism that will clear a way for the realization of the aspirations of a sturdy race.—Governor Woodrow Wilson of New Jersey in a recent speech.

Mr. C. C. Chapman the other night at the Commercial club reception stated that one of the reasons for the existence of a good Commercial club in any community was the protection of the newcomers. This is a phase of the work not usually thought of. We generally think it is our duty to get the home-seeker here, then let him shift for himself or worse still, take advantage of him.

It's a good thing to be reminded that our duty does not end with advertising our locality, exploiting its advantages, alluring the traveler in search of a home. We must make good. We must help to locate favorably those who come. We must protect them from boomers and land sharks. This is a great work and must not be overlooked.
