IMPROVED SERVICE, GRESHAM LIBRARY

Miss Culy, custodian of the Gresham reading room is enthusiastic over the number and character of new books just placed on the shelves for use of the patrons.

This week a box of old books was returned to the Portland library and as many or more new books were received. Among the new books are works on travel, adventure, scientific works and a fine collection of fiction. This gives a large number of good books to select from for the winter reading.

In addition to the large collection of shelf books in the reading room which are for circulation, the custodian is each week getting books on special request. This gives an exceptional opportunity to any desiring to look up special subjects.

The reading room will be open each Sunday afternoon from 2:30 to 5:30. It will be in charge of Mr. Culy or other competent person. No books will be circulated on Sundays, but any book may be read, works of reference consulted and papers and magazines used on that day.

This is believed to be a forward step in the use of the reading room and it is hoped many will show their appreciation of it.
