Lusted

Theodore Neibauer is making preparations to move his house in a more convenient place and will build a cement foundation under it.

Miss Inez Lusted of Gresham visited her grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Lusted, last Tuesday.

Miss Johnston, who is engaged to teach the Lusted school, started began her work last Monday with a fair attendance. We were glad to hear the school bell once more.

Mrs. Elwood Quay of this place went to Portland last week, accompanied by Miss Sester, to get her little daughter's eyes attended to, which are very weak.

Rev. C. L. Hamilton and wife and daughter, Frances, of Portland and W. H. Hamilton and wife of Wenatchee, Wash., visited their brother and sister, E. D. Hamilton, and family this week.

Mr. and Mrs. G. Lusted visited Mr. and Mrs. D. D. Jack last Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Paul Bliss of Pleasant Valley were the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Arnold Ruegg last Monday. George Wetherly of Portland was the guest of E. D. Hamilton last Sunday. He is looking after his land at this place.

Phil Eder had quite a misfortune in getting one of his fine colts hurt. He was hauling lumber from Olson's mill and in some way the horses took fright and ran away, cutting one quite badly on the hind foot. Ed. Smith of Gresham was called to dress the wound.

Quite a number attended the Hallowe'en party given at Mr. Richard Radford's at Cottrell last Monday evening.

Mrs. Neibauer and daughter, Zena returned from Salmon River, where they had been visiting Mrs. Neibauer's sister, Mrs. McIntyre.

THE SMALL FARM

A Little Farm Well Tilled is the title of a splendid little article in Vol. 1, No. 8, of Town and Country, a new publication at Corvallis, Oregon. In this article the writer states that it is the little farm that will give Oregon farm lands an increase in real value and in price. Material increased productiveness of the soil through improved farm methods alone will make lands worth more than they now are, and intensive farming methods will not be adopted generally on the larger farms.

The small farm does not appeal to the average Oregon farmer as a desirable thing for himself; his ambition looks to more acres, and not less. If he voluntarily limits himself to a little farm it will be when he believes he has earned the right to retire from real farming. He would not call 10 or 20 acres of land a farm. But he knows that present prices of farm lands are sufficient if you measure the proceeds of the investment by the returns from the big farms, and he knows that, with rare exceptions, the productiveness of the big farm is not going to be materially increased.

Of the agricultural communities of the state the fruit sections seem more populous and more prosperous. This is because it is impossible to manage a big orchard profitable, and the fruit farms have a low average acreage. These farmers as a rule have more elegance and convenience in their homes, and they have more leisure, than has the big farmer.

At last we find a town or so in the Northwest judiciously exercising public spirit by attempting to make the community ready for and deserving of increased population instead of appealing to Easterners by overcolored literature. One commercial club is paying its chief attention to the making of small farms out of big ones. Had all commercial clubs used the money they have spent in literature in buying lands and selling them in small farms on long time, they would have accomplished far more for the community and their money would have been an investment instead of a gift. The drift of population is naturally westward. The town that is attractive, the farming community that offers real opportunities, will be found by the worth-while newcomers. Demonstrate that the soil properly handled will produce sufficiently to make a 40-acre farm profitable, and that the 40-acre farm can be made to produce far more per acre than the big farm, and the community may dispense with publicity work.

Pleasant Home

Dal O. Northup has bought the little building of George Carpenter that was once used for a meat market and will move it onto his property where he will put in a photograph gallery. Mr. Northup has worked up quite a trade and puts out very good work and we are glad to see him put in a gallery.

Miss Minnie Shriner, the Gresham central girl, spent Tuesday evening and Wednesday morning with her parents and attending the Hallowe'en social-while here.

Those who attended the Hallowe'en social in the Grange hall Tuesday evening enjoyed themselves very much, although the crowd was small. After the program the supper was served. The pumpkin pie was excellent, but there was not enough to go around. We will know how many to have for a hungry crowd next time. The gypsy impersonated by Mrs. E. M. Douglass was a striking feature. She was dressed in gypsy costume. A dainty tent overspread with autumn leaves, was her abode which attracted much attention. The hall was prettily decorated with autumn leaves and jack o'lanterns.

Henry Hemmers has gone to Portland on business and will remain a week.

Mrs. Ella Serber and children of Troutdale are visiting the former's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Layman.

Ryle Hutchins and twin daughters from Albany are visiting with Mr. and Mrs. Irwin Hutchins.

Mrs. Alice Cannon has returned from Portland where she visited her sister, Mrs. G. W. Roberts. She was also at Ranier where she spent a few days with her niece, Mrs. C. W. Cole.

The Bijou Comedian company opened a series of comic entertainments in the Grange hall Wednesday and will run until Saturday evening when prizes will be given to the prettiest baby and the prettiest girl.

Mr. and Mrs. A. R. Goger and children attended the funeral of Mrs. Goger's grandma, Mrs. Wright, of Gresham, Wednesday.

From all reports, the bad boys were very good Hallowe'en night as no damage was done anywhere.

Mrs. Martin of Grand Mound, Wash., in company with her son-in-law, A. Louderback, were guests of J. Louderback Sunday at Pleasant Home.

Ed. Mathews of Tacoma was seen in our midst lately.

Mr. Lenartz is having stumps blown out on his place.

Mrs. Bell of Sandy and Mrs. Ruegg were visitors of Mrs. Shumway Tuesday.

United States surveyors are busy taking field notes for a government map of the country.

Mrs. Cannon returned from a week's visit at Centralia, Washington.

The school is flourishing under the present management.

The Baptist propose building a parsonage at Cottrell.

Mrs. J. A. Stephens was at Tia Juana on missions Tuesday.
