"May Be 'Taint So"

The story is told off a grouchy printer and newspaper man who was always calling attention to some dismal occurrence in the locality, reporting some dire calamity, repeating some slander or faultfinding or magnifying some threatened disaster. So marked was his bent of mind to look on the discouraging side of things that his associates, after reasoning with him to no avail, tried a little scheme. Some cards were printed with the words, "Maybe 'taint so." All his fellow employees and friends were supplied with these and whenever Mr. Grouch began to tell anything that had the suggestion in it of faultfinding or slander or "knocking", one of these cards was shoved under his nose. "Maybe 'taint so'."

This locality has been stirred during the past week with evil reports. Some were ready to take them up, magnify the stories a little and pass them on—not considering the source nor the fact that the complaints might not be as well grounded in fact as some supposed. In this way a mountain was made out of a mole hill. A scandal was started which should have been stifled with its first breath.

The matter came before the authorities for investigation. It was found that a child was magnifying the punishments she received at home into cruel beatings and showing scars on her arms which she said were so received. Later she admitted to an officer of the juvenile court that she may have gotten them by a fall. In other respects the child was proved untrustworthy and therefore, while there is generally believed to have been undue and unwise punishment of the child, there was no case that could possibly call for action of the court and clearly reflected upon those who, though perhaps not meaning injury, helped to spread unwarranted and injurious reports.

When people hear disagreeable reports about others they should at least give them a friend's benefit of a doubt, wait until something is proved before condemning, and in the meantime say, to themselves and others, "Maybe 'taint so'."

Some people will remind you of your mistakes all too forgetful of their own.

When a man does his duty ever so consistently there are always some who are displeased.

KEEP WELL.

"An ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure". Keep the home in a sanitary condition. Be sure, above all things, that the family supply of water is abundant and pure. Bad or impure water is the most fruitful source of sickness. Have plenty of ventilation, especially in the sleeping rooms, but avoid direct drafts. Adapt the surroundings, in the sleeping apartments particularly, to sudden changes of temperature. These are frequent sources of colds and other ailments, especially in the case of children. Be sure that there are no reservoirs for bad air in any part of the dwelling. These are generally closets, cellars and unused rooms. Keep them ventilated, and frequently air the bedding and clothing.

Be careful of what is eaten, especially of fruits of doubtful ripeness and other "trash", between meals. Even children should be taught to respect their stomachs. Keep the home surroundings cleaned up. Many diseases lurk about the premises where they are not suspected. If the outbuildings and barns are near the dwelling, it is all the more necessary to watch them. Use lime and other disinfectants freely, and let fire aid in the destruction of filth. Health is priceless, even if we forget the doctors' bills, and to forfeit it by any neglect is bad management.

SPLENDID ADVICE

That was splendid advice given the horticulturists at the Oregon Apple show yesterday. It showed that the speaker knew his subject. The speaker was Gypsy Smith and he said:

"I never saw such fine apples in my life. It shows that you have reduced apple-growing to a science and any practical man knows that these apples have only reached this perfection by spraying, pruning and keeping down the bugs.

"Your hearts are like an orchard and you should take into daily life the same interest to cultivate your hearts that you do your apples. Then will the fruit reach the perfection which the great gardener intended. Spray your heart, cut off the dead branches, chop off the warts and bumps and seless growths of fungus. Then will you become fruitful trees."

We all admit this to be true, yet how many of us spray and prune and care for our trees and forget all about the more important orchard of the heart.

Thinks Oregon Foremost State.

UNION, MISSOURI, Nov. 9, 1911
—Editor of Gresham Outlook—
I happened to be the fortunate party spoken of in your late issue under heading "Easterner got Fooled on a Big Rutabaga," as through the controversy over the turnip—rutabaga, affair my wife and I got acquainted with a most estimable lady from Oregon, Mrs. W. H. Bachmeyer. The large specimen of vegetables speak well for Oregon, but in no comparison to such women as the one referred to above. Your beautiful state has nothing in it equal to the women we met and became acquainted with. Why not let them vote, and they will help correct the wrong spoken of on the second page of your issue, November 3rd. If you were rid of the curse of the saloon and alcohol I would make my home with you during the coming year. Beautiful! with her snow-capped mountains, tall stately firs, clear rushing waters, flowers, luscious fruit and beautiful, modest, womanly women. Get rid of your saloons and you will be the foremost state in the union.

Indian Runner Ducks.

Indian Runner ducks are proving very popular with farmers. Many advantages are claimed for ducks over chickens and would pay to start with them in a small way.

Indian Runner duck eggs are finding a ready market with hotels and for family consumption. It is said they are superior to the hen egg in flavor and a little larger in size. These ducks lay 150 to 200 eggs a year. The eggs sell for more per dozen than chicken eggs. Little ducklings are easy to raise

If care is used in feeding them. They need bone building material. The young ducks grow three or four times as fast as young chicks and must have food to make bone. Feed bran, beef scraps, linseed meal, and a little cornmeal. Never feed cracked or whole corn. It will kill the ducklings.

Profits in Poultry Raising

The profits are there, and the profits are great; but to get them you must apply right methods. You cannot learn from a book. Rule-of-thumb methods take time and often end disastrously. The right way is to be guided by poultry experts who have already "made good." That is the kind of instruction the International Correspondence Schools offer in their course of 21 home lessons in poultry raising. The course covers everything on poultry raising, from eggs to profits. It doesn't matter how few or how many birds you start with, this is the only true way to do it and make it pay from the word "Go."
The value of this course to you is beyond estimation. You soon get the price back, and more, in increased profits, and the knowledge that will keep these profits coming your way. Start poultry raising right, this way, then there'll be no failure—no halfway success—but the greatest success. For free descriptive circular, write the
