HEROISM.
 There is a bit of philosophy hidden under the words of Captain Bailey, rescuer of the schooner Washington, when on being interviewed he said, "What's all this fuss about, anyhow? Can't a man even get a wink of sleep for telling about the Tatooch saving that schooner? Dangerous work?—sure! But that's what we're here for. You got to take chances."
 That's the philosophy of heroism. Captain Bailey would have been a hero if he had failed in his attempt. He saw his duty. He knew the danger but took the chance. He succeeded and is praised for his daring.
 When he said to his engineer, in starting for the wreck, "there will be no slow bells, every signal means full ahead or full astern," he showed the stuff he is made of. There was determination, force, command of the situation. He threw his whole life into the attempt to do or die. Such heroism is manly and to be praised.

THE OLD STORY.
 The Telegram commenting on the shipment of eggs into Portland wonders why more attention isn't given to this apparently profitable industry in this apparently favorable locality.
 Perhaps some of our readers can tell. It is stated that in the past ten months the railroads have brought into Portland 230 carloads of storage eggs that were shipped from Middle West points. Each carload contained 400 cases or 92,000 in all. Each case contained 30 dozen eggs or 2,760,000 dozen or 33,120,000 units.
 The average cost of these eggs to the local wholesalers to whom they were shipped beginning at an early date in the spring, is about 20 cents a dozen or a total investment of more than half a million. They cost the retailer an average of about 24 cents and they cost the consumer whatever he happened to pay for them; an average for the season of not less than 30 or 35 cents, perhaps more.

A central market building will be built on the block between Fifth and Sixth street and Pine and Ankeny streets. It will be a modern, seven-story block. The location offers many advantages especially in view of the heavy street car and suburban traffic which will land in that part of the city when the Broadway bridge is completed. It will be in the heart of one of the best business sections in the city.
 "From Portland to the mountains look out for the Outlook."

The map of China is being studied more than that of any other country just now, and the names of old Chinese cities, rivers and provinces are taking on a new interest. We believe China is awakening. It may take fifty or a hundred years, but let the modern spirit of industry, invention and progress once get hold of the stolid race, and permeate its teeming millions, the rest of the world may need to be on the defensive. The civilized world owes much to the Chinese. China is destined to become a new nation and one day wield a mighty influence.

A Y. M. C. A. employment agency has been opened for the benefit of all classes of labor and employers in Room 1, Bickel building, 243 Ash street, Portland, Oregon. An effort will be made to furnish sober and dependable help and render better service than can be secured elsewhere. This agency has complied with all legal requirements. A moderate fee will be charged employers, but they will receive absolutely fair and honest treatment.

The government was saved over $1,000,000 and a year's labor by a freak flood on the Skagit river in Washington. A channel was cut through Sterling Bend, above Mt. Vernon, Skagit county. This channel has been surveyed several times by the government and money has also been appropriated for the work. The flood has done in a few hours what was estimated to cost a million dollars.

RELATES PIONEER EXPERIENCES

 there, but were well pleased with the prospects that some day it would be a fine country, and had taken claims. That was the beginning of what is now a fine farming country and the growing city of Gresham.

The first temperance meeting in Multnomah county, east of the Willamette river, was conducted by the late James Wilson, father of J. H. Wilson now of Melrose, on the James Powell place exactly where the fine residence of Charles Cleveland now stands. Many pioneers signed a temperance pledge at that time, among whom was my father, who kept his pledge until the day of his death in 1878.

We had no schools until 1855 when Miss Lucy V. Taylor, taught the first school at Fairview. Miss Taylor afterwards became Mrs. Menzies, mother of Mrs. D. M. Roberts of Gresham, who died about five years ago at Gresham. From that time on we had about three months of school each year paid for by subscriptions.

I remember when Dr. J. P. Powell Mr. Linneman, W. G. Cathey, and in fact, all the pioneers of the Gresham country, took up their donation land claims.

There were only a few settlers at Fairview when we arrived and established our home there. They were, Dr. John Crosby, his son-in-law, Charles Fetzette, John Mills, David and John Powell and Mr. E. E. Quimby. Later on in 1852, a great many others came so we soon had enough neighbors to form a school district and have better school.

The first postoffice in this part of the country was established at Fairview with E. R. Scott as postmaster. My brother, John Dunbar, and I were the mail carriers on horseback from Portland to Sandy postoffice, as it was called at that time—now Cleone.

All the pioneers of Fairview have passed to the better land except Mr. Dunbar and Mrs. J. P. Heslin, his sister who was but two years old when the family arrived here.

Mr. Dunbar, though 67 years old, is still well and strong and is welcomed by the second and third generations of the pioneers to which he belonged as he goes in and out among them. If he was in one of the old fashioned class meetings such as he attended in the early days, he would say that he was born of Methodist parents, was converted at 16 on the old Powell Valley camp ground where the city of Gresham now stands. He joined the Methodist church at an early day and is still identified with its activities in his home locality.

In politics Mr. Dunbar is a republican of the staunch type—and has been active in all local affairs. It is interesting to think how life must look to one who has seen the changes he has witnessed during 60 years. The hardships endured, the faith in themselves and in the country and in an overruling Providence, have borne fruit and we today enjoy the prosperity of which their privations and work were the first foundation.

Profits in Poultry Raising

The profits are there, and the profits are great; but to get them you must apply right methods. You cannot learn from a book. Rule-of-thumb methods take time and often end disastrously. The right way is to be guided by poultry experts who have already "made good." That is the kind of instruction the International Correspondence Schools offer in their course of 31 lessons in poultry raising. The course covers everything on poultry raising, from eggs to profits. It doesn't matter how few or how many birds you start with, this is the only true way to do it and make it pay from the word "Go."
 The value of this course to you is beyond estimation. You save the price of a book, and more, in increased profits, and the knowledge that will keep those profits coming your way. Start poultry raising right, this way, then there'll be no failure—no halfway success—but the greatest success. For free descriptive circular, write the
