BE A BOOSTER.

Some people think to be a booster means to be something wild and fanatic. Far from it. Rather it means to see, appreciate and try to use your opportunity for your own and the general upbuilding.

The Outlook will publish the name of those who are real boosters in this locality. They will not appear right here but will be found from time to time as we can obtain them in our news and local columns.

A booster is a man who always speaks well of his town and of everyone in it; who pays his dues in the Commercial club; who wants a few more good citizens to move in; who is making some visible improvements on his own property, for he will be a property owner if he means business, and encouraging the general improvement of the town.

Some persons have the booster spirit in a very narrow sense and boost only themselves. Some are on the fence and while not knockers cannot be called active boosters. If a booster isn't active he isn't worthy of the name. The booster spirit is the very opposite of the narrow, selfish, I-want-it-all spirit. We all need a little broader spirit of progressiveness.

Among the things Hon. A. W. Lafferty promises to work for if nominated and elected Representative from the Third congressional district are the following: Enforcement railroad land grant, National Public Service commission, parcels post, return of seven million dollars due Oregon for irrigation, more liberality to homesteaders, liberal appropriations for rivers and harbors, direct election of federal judges, tariff revision downward to difference in cost of production at home and abroad, income tax, exclusion of Asiatic labor free Canal Tolls for coastwise trade, chartering of National Reserve association to issue asset currency, provided proposed bill can be amended so as to give the government paramount control over the same.

Maintenance of Statement I, Direct Primary, Initiative and Referendum and Recall. To this pretty good list of progressive measures he adds, Enforcement of the railroad land grant, LaFollette and laws for the people. All this will meet with the approval of most of the republicans of his district. There is one however that they will not so generally approve and that is "La Follette". Lafferty will not stand any better show if as good because he stands for La Follette.

The Outlook is in receipt of a bulletin on orchard management by Prof. C. I. Lewis of the Oregon Agricultural College. Its ninety-six pages are packed full of valuable information with many cuts illustrating orchard work. On over production he says: Overproduction of fruit is a dread which seems to hang over the heads of many people interested in fruit growing. Overproduction has rarely occurred in America fruit growing; at times we have had poor distribution, and one might say an over-production, but with the proper organization, with good distribution, with fruit growers controlling their fruit and handling it when placed on the market for consumption, with storage in transit rates, there is a field for fruit production for all classes. One must also remember that the average yield is low and that there are thousands of trees that will never become profitable, owing to being planted in improper locations as regards soils, frosts, etc., to poor management, to unwise choice of varieties, and one must remember that there is a large acreage each year that is practically going out of bearing.

The book has an interesting paragraph on profits in orcharding, from which we quote the following:

At times the profits in orcharding throughout the Northwest are somewhat hard to believe. There are many authentic records of profits exceeding $1,000 per acre. The average profits, however, are not nearly as great, and many people will be disappointed in their orchard investment because they are expecting unusual and unreasonable returns. In establishing profits, one should compile figures extending over a series of years; they should be based on average good orchard conditions and we should take for granted that the person interested has average ability. Under average conditions one can expect at present an income of about $200 net per acre. The income will depend, of course, upon the personal element, and the acreage, methods of management, etc.

No one growing fruit or nut trees, whether for commercial purposes or in the family orchard, can afford to be without this book, and it can be had free to all residents of Oregon by sending a request to Oregon Agricultural College, "Division of Horticulture, Corvallis, Oregon."

Stay on the Farm

Mr. E. P. Martin, superintendent of the American Sunday School Union for Oregon, Washington and Idaho, with headquarters at Portland, spent a Sunday in Gresham recently and gave an interesting address in which he referred to the National Country Life Congress held in the city of Spokane during November which he said is but one of the many evidences of the attention the rural districts of our land are attracting at the present time. This congress, together with the nation wide survey of Home Mission needs and conditions now being made by the various great denominational bodies, is in no small measure due to the interest created by the report of the Country Life commission appointed by that ever far and deep seeing statesman, Theodore Roosevelt. While this Country Life Congress discussed the "back to the farm" movement it was evident that in the minds of most of the leading delegates present that a "stay on the farm" movement was of greater moment at this juncture than any movement to take from the city the man who knew little about and could do less for the farm.

The abandoned farm of New England is an old and much discussed topic but the steadily lessening rural population of the states of the Atlantic seaboard and the central western states, New York, Ohio, Illinois and Iowa for instance, is not so well known but an equally well established fact. At first thought this may seem of small consequence but a little study will reveal the seriousness of the situation. Looking first at the economic side of the question. The lessening rural population means a decrease in production of food stuffs on one hand while a rapidly growing number of consumers on the other means increased demand with the very evident result,—prices of food stuffs soar and a consequent very earnest discussion of the "high cost of living" ensues and we, a nation with limitless stretches of fertile lands, bid fair to buy our bread from outside peoples. The effect upon social conditions is equally marked. The old time, well established country society with its round of social visits, both delightful and helpful, is a thing of the past and one of the most frequently heard complaints coming to the Country Life Commission in their nation wide investigation was the extreme loneliness of the farm life.

In the past the ruralite has played a large part in national life of every phase. There seems ever to have been a vital connection between fresh air, pure blood, and eminent success in life. A recent canvass of several cities in various parts of the land indicated that 90 per cent of their prominent people were country bred. Of ninety-eight of Chicago's most successful business men who were interviewed ninety-six were born on the farm. In professional and political life similar conditions maintain. Colleges east and west, report the heavy percentage of their graduates as being from the farm.

The church, too, owes much to the rural community for while these communities have had but one-fourth of the money and one-fifth of the talent given to christian work from them has come two-thirds of the membership of the churches of America. Only recently a census of the ministers of the cities of Minneapolis and St. Paul indicated that three-fourths of them had come from the farm.

But in other lines than these the farm influences city and national life. Court records show a surprisingly large percentage of criminals as being from the rural districts while from several centers of population comes the statement that from 75 per cent to 85 per cent of the unfortunate girls of these cities have come from the farm and the very small village.

Conditions of rural life have greatly changed during the past quarter century. A generation ago our fathers settled upon a farm with the thought that the farm should be the heritage of the family through all generations and, in order that it might be a desirable place in which to live and a wholesome community for posterity, they gave liberally of time and means to establish and maintain schools and churches. But today the desire for better advantages along lines educational, social and religious has taken the family of the early owner to some town or city and the farm, once always to be in the family, is in the hands of a speculator and occupied by a transient renter neither of whom has any interest in the future of the community for, indeed, to them it has no future.

The large number of criminal and immoral persons coming from these rural districts is not so much the result of inherent viciousness as a lack of proper instruction and restraint. These people are not so much immoral as unmoral, not so much irreligious as unreligious, not so much persistent in sin as non-resistant to temptation. The unpurged neighborhood is, as has already been said, largely without organized social life. The country dance affords about the only social diversion and there, without oversight or direction, immature youth, overflowing with spirits, mingle, the pure with the impure, the unsophisticated with the hellishly vicious Sunday in these communities is a day given to picnics, dances, baseball, hunting and fishing with the same lack of oversight. Coming from these communities, knowing nothing of church life, teaching or restraint, thousands fall an easy prey to the temptations of the town and city and are lost to society and usefulness who might and under reasonable conditions, would be the flower of our people.

The Outlook will visit a relative or friend for you 104 times during the year, brim full of news. Isn't that worth something to you?

How to cure a cold is a question in which many are interested just now. Chamberlain's Cough Remedy has won its great reputation and immense sale by its remarkable cure of colds. It can always be depended upon. For sale by Gresham Drug Co., and all Dealers.

LET US RAISE YOUR SALARY

Every man takes two steps that have, perhaps, greater bearing on his life than any others he may take from childhood to old age. The first is when he decides on what vocation he is going to follow. That is a very important step, but, it is not even half so important as the step he takes when he decides HOW he is going to prepare himself to follow that vocation.

If you want TO BE SUCCESSFUL in any line, THOROUGH PREPARATION is ABSOLUTELY NECESSARY. There is no better way to prepare for success than by taking a course in the INTERNATIONAL CORRESPONDENCE SCHOOLS. The history of our students is a history of success. We can furnish you with recommendations from thousands of students and from numerous of the leading educators of this country that prove conclusively that we can do all we claim, and more. If you have ambition and desire to better your condition, write for information and literature on any course you may be interested in.
