Imported Preserved Hen Fruit.

A case of two and a half dozen of eggs imported from China has been sent to Prof. James Dryden of the poultry department at the Oregon Agricultural College by the Oregon Pine Export company for exhibition at the big egg show to be held in the stock judging pavilion February 9.

These are the first eggs to arrive here from China in a fresh, perfectly useable condition, previous efforts to import them being utter failures. On this lot the Danish method of preserving eggs, a secret process which involves compressing wax or something similar through the pores but not beyond the shell when the eggs are new laid. The importers have tried for three years to find a safe way of bringing in eggs from China, but, owing to the long trip, in which the ship hold undergoes various changes of temperature and is poorly ventilated, all fresh eggs have spoiled before reaching this coast. Other ways of preservation have also failed to give satisfactory results, so the eggs to be exhibited at the show are the first fresh eggs from China in Oregon.

The bridge will have a span of more than three hundred feet. It will cost approximately $20,000. Engineers will be engaged at once to make soundings and draw plans and specifications and the project will be carried forward with all possible speed.

Oregon Wants Reclamation Dues.

In response to several hundred invitations to be held in Portland, February 19-21, a large number of acceptances have been received. The interest in this convention centers particularly in two things, judging from the letters received at the headquarters of the Oregon Development League: There is a unanimous sentiment for registering Oregon's demand for a more just share of the reclamation appropriation according to Oregon's contributions. There is also a strong desire for a spirit of co-operation among those chiefly interested in the principal irrigation projects of the state and for a better understanding of the problems common to them all. It is believed that united action in this respect will mean much for the development of the state. Among those who have promised to be present are members of the legislature, Desert Land Board, president of water-users associations and water-supervisors.
