"The Linotype Way is the Way that Wins."

Entered as second-class matter March 3, 1911, at the post office at Gresham, Oregon, under the act of March 3, 1879.

It isn't raining to me,
 It's raining daffodils;
 In every dimpled drop I see
 Wild flowers on the hills.
 The clouds of gray engulf the day,
 And overwhelm the town;
 It isn't raining to me,
 It's raining roses down.

Been fishin'?

Little fishes in the brook,
 Papa catch 'em with a hook?—nit.
 Dip them up by the palifal.

Political candidates in this county are almost as plentiful as smelt but fewer of them will get caught, on April 19.

Have you registered? Better do it now. With so many candidates in the field there is not a vote to be spared.

The grangers of Multnomah county and citizens generally are interested in the candidacy of Master T. J. Kreuder for the office of county commissioner. Everywhere you go you hear Tom's name put forward as the man whom every taxpayer and every man interested in the economical management of the county's business wants. Mr. Kreuder is every way qualified for the responsible position he seeks. He is a young man and believes in building wisely for the greater future. He has been in active business in Portland for 20 years. His motto is "Haste—not waste—in construction of county buildings, good roads, etc." A checking system for all county property that will insure a $'s value for the $ expended, which will mean lower taxes

After the first flurry of excitement over the announcement that the Portland Railway Light & Power company had absorbed the Mount Hood Railway and Power company, sentiment in Gresham has settled down to a more favorable view of the situation. It may even come to be considered as a good fortune that this undertaking has fallen into the hands of a company that is able and disposed to develop it to a paying basis which will be to the benefit of all concerned.

Contrary to the sentiment lately given wide publicity, conservative, thoughtful citizens and business men consider that Gresham will reach more immediate benefits from the change than it could have expected without it for some time at least. It is not seriously thought by anyone that Gresham will become a back number, that the boosting for a Greater Gresham is premature or anything of that kind. The Greater Gresham is coming more rapidly than most people realize and it matters little whether it comes by way of the Mount Hood or the O. W. P. or some other way.

The Outlook, since the announcement last Sunday, has interviewed many citizens and railway officials of both companies and gives what it believes is a fair and impartial and hopeful view of the situation. Our citizens have regarded competition as desirable, but this to be really beneficial must be between companies or roads of nearly equal strength. One strong company with capital to carry out its projects of development may result in more immediate and greater good. Anyway it is up to us to make the most of the situation and we can't do that by kicking the Portland Railway, Light & Power company. Let us make wise regulating laws not in restraint of business or traffic but in encouragement of development.

Mr. Lafferty made the principal address in favor of equal suffrage at the hearing before the House Judiciary committee on March 13, and also presented a ringing telegram from Mrs. Abigail Scott Dunaway, whom he referred to as Oregon's grand old lady.

In part Lafferty said: "I wish at least 50 of the mothers of this country were in the House of Representatives today, and that at least 25 were in the Senate. This republic can well afford to place the ballot in the hand that rocks the cradle."

MR. DABNEY GIVES IDEAS ON FRUIT

Gresham certainly has an enterprising nurseryman in W. E. Dabney. The way he is starting in to develop a general nursery business is assurance of ability and qualities that win. Mr. Dabney's father lives at Hood River and while not a nursery man is well versed in trees. The senior Dabney gave a talk Monday night before the Commercial club of that city on fruit growing. As reported in the Hood River Glacier of last week he said in part:

"While not directly interested in the fruit culture, I have made observations as much as possible in my tour. The most of the apples that are used in London and other cities are shipped in from Tasmania and Italy. In traveling through North England and Scotland one will see very few orchards, where fruit is raised for the market. However, in some parts of Ireland there are more orchards, but they are practically uncared for. In going from Londonderry to Dublin I passed through what is known as the great apple district, where they have been raising the fruit for the market for the last 200 years. As in other localities the land is crowded to its fullest capacity.

"The rows of trees are about 25 feet apart, between them rows of small fruits, and the intermediate spaces filled with growing vegetables of various kinds. They do not thin their fruit, nor do they prune or spray their trees, consequently their apples are small and quite ordinary. South Ireland has but few orchards and there the same conditions prevail as in the northern part of the country.

"On the south coast of England a great many apples are raised. The orchards there are better cared for. Baskets are used mostly to gather the fruit in and it is taken to market in the same receptacles.

"In Belgium and Holland there are practically no apples grown for the market and but very few for home use. In very southern parts of Holland, however, there is quite an acreage of young trees from two to three years old and the same condition prevails in northern Germany.

"Northern France has practically no apples, while in the south and central parts a good many are raised. The trees receive proper treatment and the fruit brings pretty good prices. In northern Italy the orchards also receive fair attention, yet the growers do not realize the value of proper pruning.

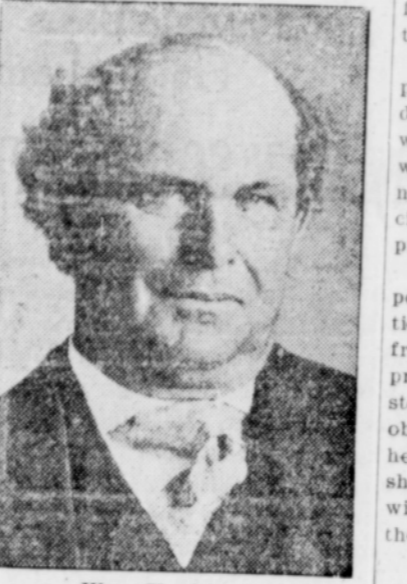

"The few good orchards in Switzerland are to be found around Lake Geneva. In some parts of the country they preserve that old custom of planting an apple tree at births and weddings, consequently the trees are in clusters or scattered. In most cases the trees are put in pasture or meadow and never cared for. On Lake Luzerne I saw a few of the trees of dwarf and vine apple and pears. The dwarf trees make beautiful arbors, while the vines climb as high as the third stories of houses. One may pick an apple for breakfast from his third story bedroom window. There are some orchards along the upper Rhine, but in most places the trees are planted in a haphazard manner in meadow and pasture land, just as in Switzerland.

"In France, part of Switzerland and the Rhineland, by toil and perseverance the people have made available thousands of acres of vineyard, the steep, stony hillsides have been terraced up with strong stone walls, in zig zags or curves, according to the location. The terraces range in size from a double bed blanket up to two or three acres. All of this net only beautifies the hillsides, but yields a good profit to the owners. However, the vineyard owners have their troubles just as people of any other occupation. Because of the climatic conditions, the insect and disease pests, it is said, that they do not have full vintage more than one out of seven years. They have a moth to contend with during the months of May and July, when school children are hired to kill them by the thousands, using fans and sticky lime."

Mr. Dabney praises the good features of the countries he visited but thinks Oregon best. He says, "Should I want to live where there is beautiful scenery, combined with an intelligent and prosperous people, where grows the luscious berry and superior apple, and where gentle zephyrs scatter sweet perfume, then give me old Oregon."

WM. HANLEY CHAMPIONS SELLING FOR SENATE

"Oregon for Oregon" is the slogan of William Hanley, the picturesque representative of Central Oregon, who, because of his marked facial and physical resemblance to William Jennings Bryan, has many times been mistaken for the thrice-defeated candidate of the Democracy for the presidency. It is for the reason of "Oregon for Oregon" and because Hanley's views coincide closely with those of Ben Selling, candidate for the Republican nomination for United States senator, that Hanley feels very friendly toward the candidacy of Selling.

Wm. Hanley.

Mr. Hanley thinks it would be advisable for the voters of this state to elect a senator who could be depended upon to do all his power to secure for the state all that belonged to it in the way of money for originating and completing irrigating enterprises. Mr. Selling in his platform has definitely committed himself to securing for Oregon its just share of the reclamation fund for promoting various irrigation projects in this state.

Mr. Hanley says that up to the present time the state of Oregon is short about $8,000,000 of its part of the reclamation fund, money that should have been used for the construction of irrigation projects in this state and which money was actually given to other states.

Mr. Selling is pledged, says Mr. Hanley, to the recovery of that money for use here, and if anybody can do it I am convinced that he will at least lend his best efforts in that direction. My acquaintance of several years with Mr. Selling has convinced me that he always has stood square-toed to the front for Oregon interests and it is about time we had such a representative at Washington.

Purpose of Housing Chickens.

Why many poultry houses fail to meet the requirements for protection to egg producers, and the main points which should be observed in building hen houses, are told by Prof. James Dryden in one of his circular bulletins.

"The purpose of housing fowls is to increase productiveness," says Prof. Dryden. "A little shelter from the cold winds and storms will add to the comfort of the fowls and therefore to the egg yield. A cold wave means a check to egg yield, and the reason is probably because the change means a sudden demand for increased fuel or food to keep up the heat of the body, and the food that has been going into the making of eggs will be drawn upon for that purpose. It is the food that furnishes the heat."

Too great difference in the temperature of the house by night and day is given as the principal reason why many houses fail. A house with double walls and windows will never be warm or dry without artificial heat, which has not yet proven practicable.

"The main requirements of a good poultry house are: Good ventilation, for fowls require much more fresh air than other farm animals; protection from cold winds and storms," says Prof. Dryden. "Fowls object to cold winds. Unless the hen is provided with shelter where she can scratch and exercise she will not be productive. Activity is the life of the hen."

LET US RAISE YOUR SALARY

Every man takes two steps that have, perhaps, greater bearing on his life than any others he may take from childhood to old age. The first is when he decides on what vocation he is going to follow. That is a very important step, but, it is not even half so important as the step he takes when he decides HOW he is going to prepare himself to follow that vocation.

If you want TO BE SUCCESSFUL in any line, THOROUGH PREPARATION is ABSOLUTELY NECESSARY. There is no better way to prepare for success than by taking a course in the INTERNATIONAL CORRESPONDENCE SCHOOLS. The history of our students is a history of success. We can furnish you with recommendations from thousands of students and from numerous of the leading educators of this country that prove conclusively that we can do all we claim, and more. If you have ambition and desire to better your condition, write for information and literature on any course you may be interested in.
