R. R. CARLSON

Pleasant Valley

The Pleasant Valley Grange Dramatic club gave quite a successful entertainment Friday evening, April 12th, when they presented the play entitled, "The Deacon." The characters were all well sustained, especially Deacon Thornton, who has a fondness for lemonade with "a stick in it," impersonated by W. U. Moore.

Miss Myrtle Snashall took the part of Miss Amelia Fawcett, who fell in love with the deacon, and always worrying about her little pet dog, sustained her part exceptionally well and forfeited her good looks and vanity by dressing her character to perfection and made a typical old maid.

Pete, a colored servant, who was always getting himself into trouble, but his ill luck was for the betterment of the other characters with whom he came in contact, was taken by Walter Rhodes, and was splendid.

George Darrah, alias Matt Wheeler, the villain, was well taken by Leslie Berke and made everybody dislike him, as he was always doing injury to others, deserting his wife and child, whom he had tired of and about to marry another when his wife appears upon the scene. The deserted wife was Miss Leona Kesterson. Miss Florence Taylor was good in the character of Mrs. Thornton, who tries to pacify everyone and keep peace.

Miss Grace Olson took the part of the maid and do not think any one could have done better. She was perfectly natural and seemed at home in the part she assumed. Mr. Leland Moore took the part of George Graef, Mrs. Thornton's nephew, who is accused of a diamond robbery, is found to be innocent, and the one who accuses him, George Darrah, alias Matt Wheeler, is the thief, was good. The other characters were minor parts but all very good. Taking it as a whole it was one of the best entertainments which has taken place at the Pleasant Valley Grange hall and we hope we will have many more of them. The hall was crowded, standing room only. It was a financial success.

Instrumental music was furnished by Mrs. M. Kronenberg, who entertained the audience between acts by her excellent playing. Mr. Staples from Portland also contributed his share of the entertainment by vocal selections which were splendid. After the entertainment dancing was indulged in until 12 o'clock. Everybody expressed themselves highly pleased with the evening's success and hope it will be repeated soon. The cast of characters is as follows:

Deacon Thornton, Mrs. Thornton's brother-in-law with a passion for lemonade with a stick in it—W. U. Moore.
George Graef, Mrs. Thornton's nephew—Leland Moore.
George Darrah, alias Matt Wheeler—Leslie Berke.
Pedro, an organ grinder—Lester Richey.
Parson Brownlow—Ernest Olson.
Pete, Mrs. Thornton's servant—Walter Rhodes.
Billy, the deacon's boy—Ellis Forsgren.
Mrs. Thornton—Florence Taylor.
Helen, her daughter—Edna Berke.
Miss Amelia Fawcett, Mrs. Thornton's maiden sister—Myrtle C. Snashall.
Mrs. Darrah, George Darrah's wife—Leona Kesterson.
Nellie, her child—Winifred Lawrence.
Daisy, Mrs. Thornton's servant—Grace Olson.
Policeman—Ernest Butler.
Gus Richey has sold ten acres of his farm to a family from Iowa, who has moved onto the place. The names at the present time of writing is not known. We welcome them to our neighborhood.
Fred Lawrence is feeling slightly improved and has been sitting up for a couple of days.
Grandpa Lawrence celebrated his eightieth birthday Friday, April 12. He was given a post card shower by the children of the neighborhood which pleased him very much. May he remain with us for another score of years.

Scenic

Merret Alben and wife of Portland are visiting at the home of Adolph Sester.

A. W. Shipley and Chancey Clark spent Sunday at home.

Miss Hazel Goger visited Miss Irene Erz, Sunday.

Lewis Miller, Jr., and wife were entertained at the Apple Grove farm of Mrs. Stone near Anderson Sunday.

Mrs. Gus Carlson and son Harry were in Portland Saturday and Sunday visiting friends and sight-seeing.

Mrs. Banks, a returned missionary from Africa, who lectured at the Cottrell Baptist church, was entertained by Miss Ida Miller during her stay here.

Phillip Eder and family visited his parents in Portland Saturday.

The splendid farm homes of F. Erz and Gus Carlson boast of new woven wire fences around their lawns, adding materially to the general appearance.

Geo. Moulton and family spent Sunday with relatives at Pleasant Home.

We are glad to see Scenic so well advertised in the Sunday Oregonian but owing to a slight mistake of the writer the location was one half mile too far west.

The ball game between Gresham and Pleasant Home resulted with a score of 7 to 6 in favor of the former. A large crowd was in attendance. The new grounds at Scenic Station were used for the first time.

Among the guests at Adolph Sester's recently were Frank Swantons and family of Portland and Mr. Boyle and wife of Clackamas.
