"The Linotype Way is the Way that Wins."

Official paper of the Town of Gresham, Oregon.
Official paper of the Town of Fairview, Oregon.

Entered as second-class matter March 3, 1911, at the post office at Gresham, Oregon, under the act of March 3, 1879.

Wonder of wonders! We now have cactus without spines, plums without pits, vehicles without horses and we're to have a Fourth without firecrackers. Oh, you reformers!

Crop statistics, given out by the department of agriculture, indicate very favorable crop conditions in Oregon.

Archie Mason has been given the contract for doing the grading and building the bridges on the Clackamas Southern Railway between Oregon City and Mollala.

The recent trial of J. A. Pender, at St. Helens, charged with the murder of Daisy Wehrman at Scappoose, failed of conviction through the disagreement of the jury. A new trial will be held probably this fall.

The formal opening of the new Portland Automobile clubhouse on the Sandy river will take place this week Thursday, Friday and Saturday with an elaborate club dinner on Sunday. The place has electric lights and all modern improvements. The grounds comprise 30 acres and the privileges will be enjoyed only by members of the club and not the general public.

"We of the W. C. T. U. are not seeking political rights, so much as domestic rights," said Mrs. M. M. Sleeth of Portland in a recent address here. "In some states of our union women are not only deprived of political rights, but have no rights in the matter of the care of their children which are recognized by the state. Fathers have been known to will their children to others than the mothers. What we plead for is homes in which both father and mother have equal rights." "The home," said Mrs. Sleeth, "is often called the woman's sphere, but in the majority of cases it is only a hemisphere." Mrs. Sleeth's address at the W. C. T. U. institute held here recently was so well enjoyed that on urgent request of those who heard her, she repeated it later in the M. E. church.

I. C. S. Students.

As there are many students of the International Correspondence schools in this locality, it will be of importance for them to note that the Portland offices have been removed from Alder street to 152 Third street, near Morrison. Mr. G. T. Judd, is manager. He will be pleased to hear from any who desire to take advantage of the courses offered by the schools and will send a representative if desired. Address G. T. Judd, manager, 152 Third St., Portland.

Lure of Nature's Beauties

[Special Correspondence to Outlook.]
If a person expects to thoroughly appreciate Nature in all her moods, or cares only to see the fancies of the smiling dame when she wears her best dress and most winning smiles, that person, should take a morning stroll while yet the sun is low and the glistening dew drop is yet untasted by the fairies of the dell. They will be amply repaid for the sacrifice of a few hours from business if they extend their walk into the later hours of the day and visit some of the places that may have beckoned to them for years ago. It may be to climb the butte for the magnificent view of a jewel in a setting of emerald and gold, or it may be to stop and look into the sluggish current of the winding stream; it may be to gather wild flowers or to hunt for the nests of birds in the brambles but you will say when you return that you have enjoyed yourself, or else your soul for the sublime poetry of Nature is all dead and buried in the long-forgotten past of your early childhood when you plucked wild flowers from the roadside in your youthful innocence, or pulled off the wings of unfortunate blue bottles that you caught in your moments of youthful crime. But let us go together; come with me to those Acadian fields of cedar and fir, grain and fruits; ferns and marguerites; let us join together in a ramble and a healthy tramp over the hills and rills and far away. It will make a picture for one's memory that is not to be obliterated by a return to the sordid cares of the day.

This is a little word picture of Gresham and its vicinity. In its green of grain and grasses, its fruits and flowers, it nestles by the slopes of the gentle hills with a canopy of silver in the vaulted dome above. Like a far off perspective the mists enshroud it all around, making the contrast softer and every angle blending into gentle curves that enchant and better emotions. It soothes and refreshes the mind to look about upon the wonderful vista of loveliness that is all of Nature's own and which owes nothing to art except the habitations that shelter the fortunate mortals whose homes are here besides the homes of the elf and fairy. It would be sacrilege to refuse the inspiring emotions of the soul at such a time. It would be atheism to doubt the Creator of it all.

And what is true of this favored spot—our home—is also true of a thousand other places all over the great Northwest. But more particularly is it true of the western slope of the Cascade range and across the fertile valley threaded by the silvery Willamette to the mountains that form a chain and border to the grandly rolling Pacific. It is the unique spot of all existence, the modern garden of Eden and we are now as its first people.

E. L. THORPE.

Independence Day will be celebrated very widely in Oregon this year. Perhaps the generally fine crop outlook throughout the state has had the effect of making the people unusually keen to enjoy a notable holiday. Anyway, many places will hold big celebrations. Albany will celebrate the coming of the Oregon Electric as well as the Glorious 4th and is making big preparations. Ashland will have a barbecue. Bend will celebrate for three days. The Dalles will have a week-long event in connection with a chautauqua session and many other points are now making plans for a big day.

Old Willamette

Willamette University at Salem, the oldest educational institution in Oregon, the college of the Methodist church, sends out a prospectus in the form of a neat folder, giving all the information one could desire if about to enter college.

Willamette is not misty with age nor narrow with sectarianism. It is one of the safest, strongest institutions of its kind in Oregon. It is well claimed that the association of young people from different parts of the state and country gives a broad outlook upon life. Strong friendships are developed to the enriching of life.

The crying need of the hour in this country of ours and particularly in the Pacific Northwest is wise devoted leadership. The opening of the Panama Canal, with its increase of commerce and of immigration to the Pacific Coast will mean new problems, social and political, in our civic life. A college education means leadership in the business world, in politics, in the professions, and all walks of life.

The tendency in the best professional schools in the country is to require a full college course as preliminary training. The complexity of the problems of the hour, the tremendous forces at work and the consequent responsibility demand the highest qualifications in the citizen of the new age.

Livestock men of the whole country have been in session in Portland during the past week and while here learned many things about Oregon's growing livestock industry. Delegates to the National Livestock exchange represented fourteen stockyards centers of the United States. They handle an immense number of cattle each year and they went back to their homes with a better idea than they ever had before of Oregon's importance as a livestock state.

Dun's Review of Business.

Dun's Review for June 15 gives the following summary of trade conditions:

Business continues to expand conservatively, but steadily, with accumulating signs of a year of more than average activity. The government statement shows a high percentage for spring wheat, with the promise that its yield will more than offset the deficiency in winter wheat. The cotton market is firm, but the weather conditions for the crop are excellent, though a decrease in acreage is forecasted. Satisfactory progress is making in the dry good market in most of its branches and the retail trade is liberal for the season. Shoe manufacturers still report a small volume of new business. Leather is dull, but firm. Hides show an easier tendency. The statistics of bank exchanges confirm the other evidences of the large volume of trade—this week they gained 8.0 per cent, over 1911 and 9.2 per cent, over 1910.

The Elks are making great preparations for the reunion to be held in Portland July 8-13. An elaborate decoration scheme is being worked out, the main streets being dressed in the national colors and in the royal purple of Elkdom. Many thousands of visitors from all over the country will visit Portland this week and the Portland lodge has made preparations to care for all who come.
