"The Linotype Way is the Way that Wins."

Official paper of the Town of Gresham, Oregon.
Official paper of the Town of Fairview, Oregon.

Entered as second-class matter March 3, 1911, at the post office at Gresham, Oregon, under the act of March 3, 1879.

TAKE A VACATION.

The vacation season is upon us once more and all feel the "Call of the Wild." Those who have had the best opportunities in the past to commune with Nature at the seaside or in the mountains are the most eager to renew and extend acquaintance with the "mother of us all."

There is something more than a figure speech in the expression "Back to Nature." There is a real necessity in the idea in these days of the artificial and superficial. Men work and worry and hurry. They suffer wear and tear from the rapid movements and changes of this work a day world. There is need of a pause, a readjustment, of physical and mental forces, a stepping out of the ruts of toil onto some hilltop for a new and broader view.

A steady hold causes weariness. It is necessary to let go that one may take a new and firmer grasp.

Where can this be done better than by taking a vacation trip to ocean's beautiful shore or out among the towering peaks of the mountain range? To listen to the incessant roar of wave or waterfall, to hear the whispers of the tall firs and drink deep from the currents of mountain air—in other words to come in contact with those influences which impress upon the mind the truths of God's infinity, eternity, wisdom and goodness, gives one a new grip on life, no matter how humdrum the past days have been.

Everyone owes it to himself and to his work to make this periodic readjustment of his forces, and this is the time. What if one finds it tiresome to take a vacation, to go on a picnic or an excursion? That simply means you are calling into play unused muscles and giving the tired ones a rest. Your whole being will soon feel rested. Hence take a vacation.

It should not be forgotten that the time is drawing nearer for the Multnomah County Fair. A little over two months and this important event will be upon us. There is a noticeable tendency to leave the preparations till the last week or two. Then they are hurriedly made or left incomplete. Opportunities have passed. Select now some of the best grains and grasses. Select some of the very best fruits and vegetables. Give them special care. Better specialize on something. Don't forget the livestock and poultry. Interest the boys and girls in the Juvenile department. There is something each one can prepare for exhibit. It is an excellent habit to encourage aside from the value of a prize.

Never leave home on a journey without a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy. It is almost certain to be needed and cannot be obtained when on board the cars or steamships. For sale by Gresham Drug Co., and all Dealers.

Which Class Are You In?

What constitutes the difference between successful men and rank failures? Just this: The successful man conquers difficulties while the failure allows difficulties to conquer him. One has grit, sand, courage, perseverance, or whatever you may see fit to call the never-say-die conquering spirit; the other is a weak-willed quitter. The one is born to rule; the other to be ruled. One is fitted to lead; the other must always be a follower. One will give orders; the other will take them. One will earn a nice, fat salary; the other will have to be satisfied with small wages.

Dress and Character.

"A man's a man for a' that," as sung by Robert Burns, may be true, but it can hardly be said of a real woman when togged out in some of the unrefined finery of this indelicate age. That the attire of many girls and women suggests the absence of real good character and is to be blamed for a great share of the debauchery and degradation existing in Chicago, is the opinion, frankly expressed by Mary M. Bartelme, public guardian for delinquents, who has been chosen to act as assistant Judge of the Juvenile Court. The girls of today, the high school girls and those just beginning to go out, declares Miss Bartelme, put on such immodest apparel that men passing them on the street turn and stare.

The indirect cause of this form of attractiveness is traced by Miss Bartelme to the mother who hasn't time to bring up her daughters, but allows them to ape their elders and gad about at will.

"If I had my way about it," said Miss Bartelme, "these girls who wear skirts reaching scarcely to their ankles, shoes that look more like stilts and a vulgar low-necked, tight-fitting dress, would be arrested."

"There is hardly a mother today who teaches her daughter to dress in simple, sweet, girlish clothes. The only difference between the average street dress and a nightgown is that the street dress is usually colored. The delinquent girls I meet and the factory girls are not to blame for adopting these outlandish styles. They copy them from the high school girls, whom they believe to be educated well enough to know what is proper to wear."

"I may be old-fashioned and prudish—I suppose I am in the eyes of the class I have been speaking about—but when progressive ideas in dress reach such a stage that women smirch the sacred sweetness of their purity, I think it is time to call a halt. Give me the old-fashioned mother."

We are not so much in need of a Moses as we are a gardener who can remove the weeds from the heads of some people whose balance wheels are the flighty shadows of inconsistency and unreason—people who are inclined to believe that the way to subdue riot and disorder is to sympathize with and encourage those who engage in riotous acts; instead of dealing with them with a firm hand and repressing their evil deeds at the beginning.

There is no sense in playing the role of the ostrich and sticking our heads in the sand to hide from our vision that which stares everybody else in the face. We might better listen to the note of warning that comes from the cave of Adullam in incoherent rumblings, for with all these sensible men must be relentlessly at war. It is no time now to treat them with indifference or conciliation, or to substitute for a government of law, one of men and emotion.

To Make Loganberry Juice

Prof. C. I. Lewis of the Oregon Agricultural College, who is responsible for much of the growth in popularity of the loganberry, has an excellent method of preparing the juice so that it will keep through the winter.

Loganberries make a most delightful beverage, says Prof. Lewis. To prepare the juice, put the berries on the stove with just enough water to keep the fruit from scorching. Heat slowly, mixing and crushing occasionally with a large spoon. Be sure not to allow the berries to boil; 180 degrees would be, probably, as much heat as necessary. After the berries have softened, put them in an ordinary cloth bag and drain out the juice. The process can be much simplified by a small press.

In choosing the berries try to get those thoroughly ripe. Add one-third the amount of sugar when the juice is put on the stove, and stir occasionally until it is thoroughly heated, but do not allow it to boil. If it boils the vinous flavor is destroyed, and the high aroma as well. In bottling the juice drive the cork in slightly and fill the space with paraffin.

This is a most healthful beverage. Half an inch to an inch in a glass of water will be enough. Some may wish to add more sugar, though the acid flavor is pleasant. It is, I believe, superior to grape juice. The time will come when Oregon will be shipping out train loads of this juice to the east and middle west. It will become a popular drink in regions where it is very warm in summer. It is extremely refreshing and cool, and children may be allowed to drink as much as they wish.

The loganberry makes one of the finest jellies known, also. Truly, our loganberry is coming to its own. With the great demand for canned fruit, a similar demand for the dried, and with the possibilities along the line of juices, syrups and jellies, there is a great future for the loganberry industry.

full of germs which, if they get into the milk, produce abnormal changes, some of them breeding disease.

The farmer sits down under such a cow, without cleaning it, and milks into a wide-mouthed pail into which at every motion and every breath of air, there drop particles containing germs. Each germ makes two every twenty minutes—that is, they multiply to eight times their number every hour at ordinary temperature. You can see what it means to allow milk to cool slowly instead of cooling it artificially at once.
