Summer Pruning.

It is almost time to summerprune the fruit trees. The continuous rains and cool weather have delayed twig growth to some extent and consequently the time to prune should be delayed.

If summer pruning is done too early the buds below the cut (wound) will break out just below the wound; if done too late there will be no opportunity for these buds to swell and form fruit buds, which is one important object in pruning at this time of year.

Under natural development of plants certain buds produce twigs and leaves and other buds break open and form flowers and fruit. There is a sort of balance between the leaf surface of the tree and the root system. The leaves act as a crude sort of manufacturing establishment to receive the sap as it is carried up from the roots and they put it in a condition so that the plant can use it. If for any reason the roots fail to perform their functions the leaves are unable to supply the plant and it soon dies of starvation. On the other hand if part of the top of the plant is removed and the supply of sap is not diminished, the remaining portion of the top receives an excess of sap.

A theory is held by many horticulturists that if pruning is done just at the right time during mid-summer, when most of the season's growth has stopped, that the excess of sap due to the pruning will be forced into undeveloped leaf buds and weak fruit buds, causing a formation of strong healthy fruit buds. In many cases this theory seems to work out in practice and especially so in parts of Western Washington where excessive wood growth is quite common. Some varieties have been forced into bearing earlier than is their habit, but whether it should be a general practice and with all varieties of tree fruits still remains to be worked out.

If the wood growth is very vigorous the practice is a good one. In some cases both winter and summer pruning should be done.

The time to prune during summer is when the vigorous wood growth has stopped and the terminal bud at the end of the young wood has formed. This will be at a different time in different localities. In general, in Western Washington, from the middle of July until the middle of August is a good time, but this season the time will probably be two weeks later.

The amount of wood to remove will depend upon the kind of tree and amount of pruning it has previously had.

All dead or diseased wood should be removed from any tree at any time; branches which rub or interfere should be removed; useless wood such as water sprouts should be cut out. These should all be removed close to the branch or trunk from which they spring so that no stubs are left. The amount of new growth to remove will depend on the individual tree. In general, about one half of each young twig should be removed in pruning apples or pears; about three-fourths in pruning peaches and usually about one-third in pruning plums or cherries.—J. L. Stahl, Horticulturist Western Washington, Experiment Station.

CHILD ORATOR

VERY PLEASING

The entertainment by little Miss Grace Lucinda Giese at the Commercial club hall last Friday night was a surprise to all present. While the attendance was small on account of the vacation time, those who were there felt well repaid. Miss Giese is just seven years old and has been before the public for about three years. She delivers a lecture, entitled, "Mother, Home and Heaven." Her voice is clear, and her style of address, gestures and all are almost above criticism, from the initial bow to the good bye kiss which is affectionately thrown to the audience. Her little brother and sister, younger by a year or two years, assisted. The little lecturer was very outspoken in favor of woman's suffrage. She is a natural orator and is happiest when following this inclination.

The Reason Why

some people fail to make a financial success is not because they do not have the ability to make money, but because they lack persistency or stick-to-it-iveness. You CAN save if you WILL. Perhaps you have tried to develop a bank account and have failed. Does that one failure justify poverty in old age? This strong bank offers you all the inducements and facilities possible for a bank to offer. With the ready assistance and advice of which customers of this bank may avail themselves, there is no reason why you should not accumulate an independent fortune.

MANY HEAR CHAPMAN, THE CUSTER SCOUT

A large crowd was present at the Scenograph Theater to hear the illustrated lecture by Alfred L. Chapman, a scout in General Custer's army. He was a witness at the battle between Custer and the Sioux Indians on the Little Big Horn river in Montana, June 25, 1876. He had slides depicting events up to the time of the battle. He also had costumes worn by guides, scouts and cowboys.

Mr. Smith is lucky in securing for a town the size of Gresham, a lecture of such high quality and useful historically by a man in such great demand as Mr. Chapman.

The lecture by Geo. Ash, the returned Mexican rebel, was also very interesting.

Claude Smith is to be commended for his enterprise in furnishing clean entertainment for the masses.

Investigations without end have been directed at rural life and the end is not yet, but now comes the government with its announced intention of muckraking the cities, and they need it more than the country ever did. A survey is to be made of urban life with a view to solving some of the problems that are found in every municipality. A government official who passed through Portland the past week told of the plan and says a great municipal exhibit will probably be gathered for the Panama-Pacific Exposition.

Appropriations for Oregon River and Harbor improvements, that seem sure to be forthcoming, amount to over $2,300,000. The bill has passed both houses of Congress and has been approved by committees, awaiting only the president's signature. The biggest single item is $1,000,000 for the mouth of the Columbia work, while the lower Willamette is scheduled for $180,000. Tillamook Harbor and the Nehalem river and harbor improvement each get $100,000. The Dalles-Celilo canal is listed for $700,000.

Picking of the Rogue River Valley fruit crop is now under way and it is the biggest in the history of this famous section. It is estimated there will be from 125 to 150 cars of pears shipped this season and from 500 to 600 cars of apples, all of fine quality.
