In the summary of the stock market the other day it was recorded, "Cattle higher, hogs strong, sheep steady." That's generally the case especially with hogs.

Read this Trade Revival Number all through. Don't miss the ads. of the up-to-date business places of this locality who solicit your trade.

The Outlook feels a sense of loss in the death of Mrs. C. C. Wagner of Boring. She was our efficient correspondent for that locality for several months. We join with the many friends in offering sympathy to the bereaved family.

A movement is on foot to unite the Taylor and Grace Methodist churches in Portland. If this should be done it is not unlikely that a large office building would be built on the site of the Taylor Street church. The policy to combine in religious work is to be commended. It means greater economy and efficiency.

The Prohibitionists certainly have a way of throwing themselves into the fight. If they don't win the nomination they win an individual victory. National Chairman Hinshaw, of Portland, has issued a call for 5000 heroic men and women to take up the task of winning each 100 voters for their ticket this fall. The call asks for "heroic" men and surely they will have to be of that type.

The population of Oregon is the increased between 30,000,000 and 35,000,000 this year, only the newcomers are young salmon and not people. That number of baby salmon will be liberated into the streams of the state from the various hatcheries. The fish, when released, will be from five to eight months old and are expected to be able to fight their own battles thereafter.

Loganberry culture, a new industry, is growing to large proportions in this state. At Brooks alone 34,000 crates were shipped to a Portland cannery, netting the growers $31,000. A total of 37 cars of loganberries was shipped from Brooks this year. The acreage given to this fruit is constantly on the increase. One man will set 200 acres in Polk county during the fall and plans to install canning, drying and bottling machinery.

Hotel men of the state have launched a campaign to attract eastern tourists to Oregon. At a recent meeting of the state association, it was decided to carry on extensive advertising and publicity work throughout the East to show the scenic beauties of the Pacific Northwest to the intending traveler. It is the plan to distribute many folders and pieces of attractive literature illustrating this subject.

WHAT THEN?

Farm lands in France are the most intensively cultivated in the world. That is, they are so treated as to give the maximum of return to the owner.

The traveler in France finds that this is because the average farmer is the average landowner, whether his holdings be one acre or 500 acres. The farmer conserves his land; he takes care that the crops do not cause it to depreciate in value.

But were the State the landowner, what would the farmer do? While he had an opportunity he would take the maximum from the soil, deplete it of its fertility.

And with Single Tax in operation the state would be the landowner, in fact, if not in theory. The Single Taxers declare as much and they point with pride to the fact that all farm lands, all city lots will ultimately be state-owned by the operation of Single Tax.

But as state ownership would mean depreciation of land we should soon come to the situation where Single Tax has absolutely destroyed its value to the state or any one else.

Is that what the Single Taxers desire.

The Farmer

The country used to be the place for the man without capital. Uncle Sam, as the old song goes, was rich enough to give us all a farm. Today we begin to hear the complaint that the countryman must be either a capitalist or a hired man, says Munsey's Magazine. It is the city we are told, that affords the opportunities for energy, enterprise, talent, to gain recognition and reward even though they have no immediate backing of capital. The city makes the capitalist, and then the capitalists go out to the country—for weekends and vacations and the fun of spending their money.

There is something in these ideas, no doubt, and the census reports show that they are having their effect upon the movement of our population.

Massachusetts has 3,125,000 persons in cities and towns of more than 2500 inhabitants, and only 241,000 in the country and villages. Even in Illinois, in the heart of the agricultural region, the urban population has outrun the rural, and the same is true of Ohio.

Vermont is the only New England state where rural population, thus reckoned, exceeds urban. The south and west contain the greatest proportions of rural inhabitants. Texas has three times as many rural as urban, Georgia almost four times as many, and Arkansas more than six times as many.

Yet there is another side to the picture. The greater the rush to the cities, the fiercer becomes the competition for every opening in business. As the producers of food dwindle in numbers and the consumers multiply, the cost of living is forced upward and the conditions of the struggle become more and more difficult. The rewards of success are still there, but the penalties of failure grow more and more terrible.

Let the farm lad who dreams of the "opportunities" of the city think twice—yes, thrice—before he yields to the lure of the crowded market place. Will money—even if he can succeed in grasping it—repay him for leaving the healthier and more independent life of the country, with its freedom from fear of the squalid poverty so hideously in evidence in our seething slums?

The Real Attraction.
English Lady—You American girls are so pale! I don't see how your white faces attract so many of our young noblemen.
American Girl—It is not our white faces that attract them. It is our green-backs.

Mrs. C. C. Wagner

Emma Iretta Carrol was born in Iowa, March 4, 1889. Her parents moved to Stanton, Nebraska, where she grew to womanhood and was married to C. C. Wagner. They came to the coast about eight years ago and lived for some time in Seattle. For the past year they have made their home in Boring. Mrs. Wagner had been ill but a short time, and last Monday was taken to Good Samaritan hospital, Portland, where a surgical operation was performed last Tuesday morning, Aug. 13. Help came too late to save her life, and she passed away at 3 p. m. She leaves a husband and two children, Frank aged 14, and Roberta aged 8, also her mother, four brothers and two sisters to mourn her untimely death.

Mrs. Wagner was a fine musician and for several months past was organist for the Boring M. E. church. She had the advantage of a christian home and training, and during her last illness was constantly in prayer. She left a good testimony of her faith.

The funeral services were held at Boring in the M. E. church, and were conducted by Rev. A. B. Calder. Interment was in Damascus cemetery. A large concourse of friends attended the funeral. The floral offerings were beautiful and profuse.

Buy it now. Now is the time to buy a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy. It is almost certain to be needed before the summer is over. This remedy has no superior. For sale by Gresham Drug Co., and all Drugists.

WHY VOTE FOR TAFT?

The following statement from Taft's speech of acceptance is a very succinct putting of the situation from the Republican viewpoint. Why vote for Taft? Let Taft answer.

"For the present it is sufficient for me to say that it is greatly in the interest of the people to maintain the solidarity of the Republican party for future usefulness and to continue it and its policies in control of the destinies of the nation. I cannot think that the American people, after the scrutiny and education of a three months' campaign, during which they will be able to see through the fog of misrepresentation and demagoguery, will fail to recognize that the two great issues which are here presented to them are, first, whether we shall retain, on a sound and permanent basis, our popular constitutional representative form of government, with the independence of the judiciary as a necessary key to the preservation of those liberties that are the inheritance of 1600 years, and, second, whether we shall welcome prosperity which is just at our door by maintaining our present economic business basis and by the encouragement of business expansion and progress through legitimate use of capital."

The Outlook has received the Oregon Experiment Station Bulletin on The Soils of Oregon and Orchard Irrigation Studies. Also one on the Pollination question in which the pollination of apples and pears is discussed in all its phases. It would be well for all orchardists and all who want to make a study of fruit trees to send for these bulletins. They are sent free on request.

This year's Nile flood is the poorest on record, but the Nile valley will not suffer. The British government has stored up, by the great dam at Assouan, sufficient water to save the land. It is doing for Egypt what Joseph did in his day, but in a different way.

In Canada the law of the church cannot take precedence of the law of the land, so the supreme court has decided. Hence legal marriages annulled by the Catholic church are legal marriages still. And this is the law in the United States.

England will girdle the globe with a belt of wireless stations. They will be costly but not so costly as war ships which it is believed they will to some extent supplant.

Every dollar you spend in your local territory helps you. You can even afford to pay higher prices, if necessary, for you will get returns on your investment.
