

ONE MILLION IN RAWHIDE

Stockyard Show a Revelation.
Union Meat Company Entertainers.

E. L. THORPE.
Down at the stockyards they have got a million dollars encased in rawhides. Sounds strange, doesn't it? But they are there and they came from all over the country. When a visitor looks at the herds of Jerseys, Ayershires, Holsteins and Guernseys it takes a whole lot of imagination to realize the wealth of a good dairy herd, even though the visitor be a dairyman—that is a dairyman from Eastern Multnomah. Out here we have dairy herds of varying sizes, with an average of a dozen head to the herd, and scarcely one of them would bring a hundred dollars except a few lately imported. The herds at the stockyards are object lessons in fine stock and their entire value lies in their butter producing abilities. A cow that will net its owner $240 a year is some cow. She is there and her exact value is said to be $1800. That is over 13 per cent on the value but she is not for sale. The owner of 10 such cows and a 20-acre farm anywhere in this vicinity would be rich in no time, for to the butter profits would be added the value of the calves, which down at the stock show are worth $150 when only a day old, and their value increases amazingly as they grow older. The lesson is that they are just as easily kept as a scrub animal and worth twenty times as much.

The stock show was opened yesterday morning and the attendance for the first day was very gratifying in every way. Hundreds of people from all over the county were there and many from a distance. Special cars took the crowds down there under the care and direction of the business men's clubs of the East side. Those in charge of the excursions were G. E. Welter, J. H. Nolte, Dan Kellaher, O. M. Plummer, L. M. Lepper and Councilman McGuire, and they made a success of it in a way that the visitors fully appreciated. A fine dinner, of strictly home cooking had been provided by the packing companies which was the least of the surprises that the visitors enjoyed. In the stock pens, and in the abattoirs of the Union Meat company they found much more of interest than eating a good dinner, for dinners can be had every day, but fine stock shows don't come so often.

Uniformed guides were in attendance and the visitors were taken to the cattle pens where the million dollars in leather was seen. Then through the yards, overflowing with high grade cattle, sheep and hogs awaiting sale on the abattoirs, and on into the newer additions that are yet unfinished but which are costing the company $50,000 more. The system that handles a volume of business aggregating $12,000,000 a year was explained and to a novice it was staggering. It seems simple enough to look at a lot of cattle, sheep and swine and say that it is a fine display. So it is but the management is fine that directs it and puts forth the enterprise and exertions that have brought the annual stock show to such perfection that a million dollars can be seen lying around in the cattle stalls to be wondered at and praised by everybody whether judges of fine stock or not.

The dairy exhibit in the Union Meat company's plant is just a little bit the best ever. Oregon products are there in comparison with that from other states, and our rank as producers of butter and cheese will be known before the show closes. From the indications there is good reason to believe that Oregon will not fall behind any other state represented. Some of the very best are there in competition and are striving hard to carry off first honors.

MORE CANDIDATES ARE NOMINATED

Saturday nights nominating caucus was attended by about 70 voters, some of whom refrained from taking a part in the proceedings. The following were endorsed for the city offices to be filled at the coming election: For mayor, E. C. Lindsey; recorder, James Elkington; treasurer, Mrs. Minnie Clana-han; marshal, James McKinney. Councilmen—George Metzger, L. L. Kidder and W. K. Biddle. Nominating petitions have been circulated and filed by all of the nominees who have signified their acceptance, but some of both tickets will decline. The race for mayor has narrowed down to Lewis Shattuck and E. C. Lindsey. Mr. Elkington has declined to run for recorder, leaving the field to D. M. Roberts. For treasurer the nominees are J. H. Metzger and Mrs. Clana-han, while the office of marshal will be contested by Henry Gullickson and James McKinney. For councilmen there will be at least six candidates, but some of those nominated will decline to run. Acceptances have not been filed by any of them yet but will be handed in before the time limit expires. The nominating petitions were thought advisable by the city attorney to comply with the primary law.

H. J. WALLACE WILL GO TO CALIFORNIA

Attention is again directed to the auction sale to be held at the Sweet Briar farm next Thursday. Mr. Wallace has succeeded in building up a fine herd of Jersey dairy stock, all of which will be sold. He is retiring from the business and will move to Southern California where he will engage in other pursuits.

Mr. Wallace came here about five years ago from Portland where he was at one time engaged in the grocery business. He was for awhile a teacher of bookkeeping in the Behnke-Walker business college. The Sweet-Briar farm belongs to E. B. Williams, who bought it 23 years ago when it was practically a wilderness. It contains 240 acres nearly all in cultivation or in pasture, and is one of the finest farms in Eastern Multnomah. Mr. Williams makes it his country home, being a well-known lawyer in Portland.

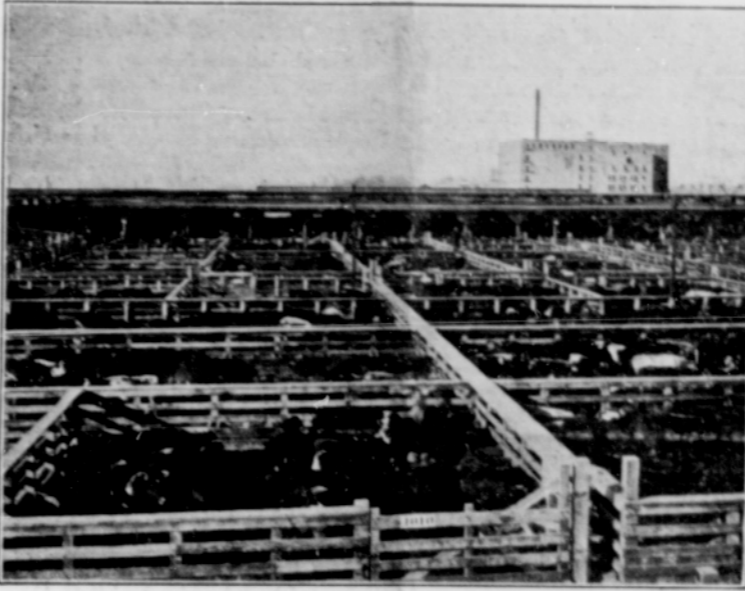

We were able to purchase through a Japanese importer some beautiful pieces of hand painted china at prices that will interest everyone. Assortment includes nut-bowls, sugar shakers and many novel pieces, suitable for gifts.

HEART OF LIVESTOCK INDUSTRY OF THE NORTHWEST

SCENES AT THE UNION STOCK YARDS. The Livestock show opened yesterday and will continue this week. There is an exceptionally fine display of blooded cattle, sheep and hogs. The Outlook is indebted to the Peninsula Herald for the use of the above pictures.

CROWDS THROUGH GRESHAM DIST' BOOTH

Minneapolis, November 15.—Editor Outlook:—Just a line to let you know the booklets arrived last evening. I needed them badly as the first three days of the show I had nothing to offer. The booklets are fine and compare favorably with any offered at the show. I need offer no apology when passing them out.

The first two days of the show drew a curiosity crowd and children of the city came and sat down in the booth and talked. I had many inquiries in regard to Gresham, and find a goodly number who are interested in a place so close to Portland, and many are surprised to hear that there is a good county east of Portland, saying they thought the best country was just west of the hills back of Portland, and insisted all east of Portland was a big gravel bed. These people went away saying they were interested in the country east of Portland and carrying a Gresham-Pleasant Home booklet.

Mr. Towle, a friend of our good citizens the Honeys, called upon me in the Oregon booth, and we had a pleasant chat. Mr. Towle states he expects to come to Gresham. He is a very successful business man of Minneapolis, and a man we will be glad to have with us.

The show is a grand success, a great education, a bringing before the people of actual facts in material form and is absolutely free from real estate booming, being promoted by the Northwestern states.

Tomorrow, Saturday, is Oregon Day and we are going to give away seeds, Ferns and mistletoe; also Rose City buttons, "1913" with an Oregon ribbon.

Everyone tells us we have the greatest exhibit at the show, and of course we attract lots of attention. More later.

C. S. SMITH.

FOREIGN-BORN WOMEN MUST BE NATURALIZED

According to an article in the Oregon Journal of Nov. 16, many foreign born women have applied to the county clerk's office for blanks to take out their first naturalization papers. The law requires women of foreign birth to become naturalized as well as men, even though their husbands are citizens.

This is contrary to the information given to Mrs. Gust Larson of Gresham, by a deputy county clerk, when she went last week to make application for citizenship papers. She was told positively that such a move was unnecessary since her husband was a citizen. Mrs. Larson consulted lawyers who agreed with the view expressed by the deputy county clerk.

The naturalization hearing closed Saturday. Henry B. Hazard, naturalization examiner of Seattle, was in charge of the cross examination of applicants.

HAPPY HEART CLASS MEETS AND ORGANIZES

The Happy Heart class met at the home of their teacher, Miss Viola Mathews to organize, but their main object was to open the box of candy they won last Sunday for giving the largest amount of money toward the song books.

The officers chosen were, president, Wilson Eastman; vice-president, Mabel Michel; secretary, Loren Myers; treasurer, Oral Raney. Committees were appointed for refreshments and decorating the church. They meet again the first Tuesday in December. Those present were, Hazel Shattuck, Marjiam Gillman, Harry Hamilton, Winifred St. Clair, Wilson Eastman, Clark Stillion Albert Camp, Grace Fieldhouse, Leta Mathews, Oral Raney, Mabel Michel, Benma Mathews, Loren Myers, William Belt, Glen Risher and Guy Fieldhouse. Refreshments were served and games played and all left for home at 9:45.

INTERESTING MEETING, PATRON-TEACHERS

An interesting meeting of the Parent-Teachers' association was held at the schoolhouse last Friday evening. A constitution and by-laws were adopted. O. I. Neal was elected president in place of Bert Lindsey, resigned, and Mrs. C. H. Lane was elected treasurer in place of Mrs. Gertrude Metzger who resigned. The program included piano solo by Miss Irene Byrnes of Portland, a paper on "How parents are to know the conditions in the school," which was followed by general discussion which was freely participated in by both teachers and parents. The next meeting will be held on Dec. 18.

Rockwood Grange masquerade, Wednesday evening, Nov. 27, Thanks giving eve. All are welcome. 77

Good apples, good cider, a good fire in the evening and the weekly Oregonian makes life on the farm a pleasure. It and the Outlook one full year for $1.75.

CARROL S. SMITH AT MINNEAPOLIS

Oregon and Gresham District Awake Interest of the Easterners.

The Outlook is in receipt of a letter dated Nov. 12, from C. S. Smith, who is in Minneapolis attending the great Northwest Land show. A part of his letter follows:

"I arrived in Minneapolis Saturday morning and have been busy trying to get the exhibit in shape for opening day, 'today' and we have done fine. The exhibit is the most complete I have ever seen, we having a great deal more stuff than we had room to display. Several boxes we didn't open owing to lack of room, but the Great Northern and Northern Pacific railroads advised us tonight that we could have windows in their ticket offices down in the city.

I met personally Mr. Lewis Hill, president of the Great Northern, and Mr. Jas. Hannaford, vice president, Northern Pacific railway, in the Oregon exhibit tonight and Mr. Hill said, 'The Oregon exhibit in my opinion is the most comprehensive of the whole show' and stated that he was glad indeed that the great state of Oregon had come to the front in such a substantial way. Last year they were hardly in evidence, this year they are the whole show.

I do not know how many people were in attendance today but there were big crowds all day and many expressed the desire to come to Oregon.

Our booklets have not arrived but I am looking for them in the morning. I need them badly. Oregon, so far is short of delegates to talk to the people and it keeps us at it long hours. At present the secretaries Eugene Commercial club, Oregon City Commercial club, and Gresham Commercial club are all that are here to handle the exhibit but more will undoubtedly come today. The show is a great success, and is doing wonderful work in educating the people in regard to the Pacific Northwest. Absolutely no literature of a real estate firm is allowed to be passed out and people seem to realize that they are being given reliable information."

The Minneapolis Journal under date of Nov. 13 has the following comment on the Oregon exhibit:

The profusion and variety of land products shown in the Oregon exhibit at the Northwestern Products exposition in the Armory are so great as to bewilder the visitor. The products which represent practically every variety of fruit and vegetable native to the temperate zone are shown just as they come from the farms and gardens of the state, arranged tastefully but without any effort to draw attention to the manner of display rather than to the things displayed. The 550 feet of space occupied by the exhibit is enclosed by a railing with a top decoration of huge Oregon pumpkins and festoons of Oregon grapes, the leaves of which closely resemble holly. Apples, potatoes, corn, beans, oats, millet, rye, alfalfa, barley, sweet corn, yellow dent corn, clover, vetch, tassel, turnips, cucumbers and even the tobacco leaf and cauliflower are shown in the Oregon exhibit.

Corn that yields sixty bushels to the acre, clover that grows to a length of six and seven feet and yields four and five tons to the acre, rye that stands seven feet high, and vetch, a forage plant, which yields as high as seven tons to the acre, are shown in the exhibit. Pumpkins and squish figure prominently among the products shown by the state of Oregon. The largest squash weighs 127 pounds, and, except for color, looks more like a huge boulder than a product of the soil. Pampas grass which is used to decorate yards and gardens, mistletoe grown in Oregon and gourds that look like large goose eggs, are shown to illustrate the variety of the products that may be grown in the state.

Fishermen will be interested in the exhibit of fish from the rivers of Oregon. A royal chinook salmon that weighs thirty pounds and a sturgeon the same weight from the Willamette river will indicate what the Oregon rivers yield.

Apples in great variety from the apple district in the Umpqua valley are shown among other products from the state. The apple exhibit
