THANKSGIVING

Glad I'm a boy and not a girl.
An' my hair's straight, an' doesn't curl;
An' my dog lost his tail—not leg;
An' we've got food—don't have to beg.
An' my dad's nose is white, not red;
An' I'm alivin' an' not dead.
Folks wat's not thankful, just don't look!
Bet I could count off things enough
Most any time—to fill a book!
—Ann Thorne, in Little Folks Magazine.

PROHIBITION MAY COME.

Eighteen Oregon cities voted on the liquor question at the recent election. Besides Gresham there were Albany, Eugene, Hood River, Lostine, Roseburg, Cottage Grove, Silverton, Enterprise, Glendale, Oakland, Wallowa, Sutherlin, Springfield, Tegal, Lebanon, Grants Pass and Woodburn. Of these only seven went "wet," the others remaining or going "dry" by varying majorities, the greatest being at Eugene.

Of the towns remaining "wet" Grants Pass gave the liquor side 94 votes, Woodburn 32, Glendale 19, Oakland 15, Sutherlin 36, Springfield 20 and Gresham 31. These small margins indicate what is in store for the "wet" towns at the next election, for it is almost a certainty that everyone of them will adopt prohibition at the next opportunity. The reason for this assertion is not hard to fathom, for the woman vote is sure to be a factor at the next general election and such small majorities as are shown above will be easily overcome by their votes.

It is the evident intention of the prohibitionists to make an effort to carry the whole state next time, but such a move might jeopardize the work in local districts, and much ground would be lost if the state as a whole went "wet."

THE SLANDERER

There is in Portland a so-called paper that it were best to shun by all. Its breath reeks of venom and its utterances of a poison that once instilled into the susceptible mind of youth and innocence could find no condonation in a virtuous heart, and if the silent stars that look down in a love of light upon the earth could speak; or the murmuring wind that sends its cooling breath upon the world could make a vocal sound to its own murmurings; then should we ask them of the Upas tree that deadens the energy and chills the life of our society, and lips, and makes the pulses beat or drives the color from the cheek and the hand tremble in a passion of the soul, so that words are not adequate to tell the tale of its fear for the venom that is heaped upon it; and if we would list to the answer that would steal in dirge-like music from the spheres above while the drifting clouds held over their faces a mantle to hide their blushes; or bend our ears to catch the sound that the zephyrs dropped as they faintly, with less of music and more of sadness, told of that poison of life and cup of death, we would hear the words: "The Slanderer."

Assessment valuations on the First State Bank, the Bank of Gresham and the Bank of Troutdale were ordered reduced by the County Board of Equalization last Friday as follows: First State Bank from $25,540 to $18,050; Bank of Gresham from $15,300 to $12,000; Bank of Troutdale from $12,000 to $9,600. All of the banks in the county were given like relief except three, the total reduction being $1,352,435.

THAT MAJORITY BAND WAGON.

In a rather petulant tone of voice the Oregon City Courier takes some exceptions to the Outlook's suggestions that W. S. U'Ren would better get on the majority band wagon and stay there if he expects to be elected governor. It says:

"This kind of advice, if followed, would stop all progression and reforms. It would have elected Taft, would have prevented women from voting, would have left Oregon in the hands of the politicians as of old."

"The women have been voted down in Oregon seven times because the majority on the band wagon hung together. Every reform in the United States has come through men getting off the band wagon and wading through defeat."

The Outlook meant what it said and referred to the majority who are opposed to single tax. Of course the Courier understood what was meant but it prefers to have the public think otherwise. As the paid champion of single tax it pretends to think that Mr. U'Ren will some day win out. If he doesn't he will be a martyr to the cause, which will probably be glory enough. Perhaps he won't expect to be elected and will only be a candidate to detract attention from his attempts. Seriously, to run for governor or any other office on a single tax platform he will get snowed under so deeply that he won't be worth looking for after the election.

The majority band wagon in this case is a pretty safe and sound vehicle, as it has only been used once and can be trusted to carry Mr. U'Ren's opponent to victory when its use is needed again, unless he forswears single tax and gets aboard of it in the interests of the people. With the single tax idea against him Mr. U'Ren would never get past the primaries unless he should choose to wait and run as an independent. In the latter case he would have two or more principal opponents and might succeed in electing the man he desires, but never himself.

L. W. Hill, president of the Northern Pacific, declares that the Oregon exhibit at Minneapolis and St. Paul is the most complete and comprehensive display of its kind among all of the exhibits from the Northwestern states ever assembled.

Some of the articles shown there are from the Gresham district. In fact the best of them came from here and are attracting nearly all the attention. Among the exhibits are four small bundles of Challenge oats that were found growing in a potato field near Corbett. They were laboriously cut with a pocket knife on a hot day and were cured in the shade, thus retaining their natural green color. They were shown at Salem and at the Gresham fair, and attracted the attention of all the railroad managers to such an extent that several requests were made for them. They were finally given to Carrol Smith, who took them with him, and they are just making the eyes bulge out of every head that stops before them.

The national grange has adopted a resolution asking President Wilson to appoint a new Secretary of Agriculture. A granger is wanted at the head of that department. Secretary Wilson has outlived his days of usefulness and will have to retire anyway, so that a granger in his place would seem to be just what is needed.

Flagged Train with Shirt
Tearing his shirt from his back an Ohio man flagged a train and saved it from a wreck, but H. T. Alston, Raleigh, N. C., once prevented a wreck with Electric Bitters. "I was in a terrible plight when I began to use them," he writes, "my stomach, head, back and liver was in bad condition, but four bottles of Electric Bitters made me feel like a new man." A trial will convince you of their matchless merit for any stomach, liver or kidney trouble. Price 50 cents at all Druggists.

THE EUROPEAN WAR SITUATION

Turkey has refused the terms of peace submitted by the five nations now crowding the Turkish armies toward the walls of Constantinople.

But what will the great powers of Europe do in the event of Turkish defeat? "Austria and Russia have been watching with covetous eyes for half a century the fertile plains of Macedonia," says Stephen H. Trowbridge in The Outlook. "Are they going to permit these upstart nations to capture so large a prize? These are the questions that are stirring Berlin, and Vienna and St. Petersburg today. For beyond Macedonia there is the greatest prize of all—the fair and commodious harbor of Constantinople, the straits of the Bosphorus, and the command of the future highway to India. I think there is no better way of describing this situation than by a quaint Oriental parable, says Mr. Trowbridge.

"There was once upon a time a beautiful silken carpet of many colors and of glossy sheen stretched to view upon the floor. Around the border were gathered merchants from many nations—the Russian, the Englishman, the German, the Italian, and many others. They admired the texture and estimated the value of the antique rug, but all the while their eyes were fixed upon a flashing diamond which had been cast upon the rug at the very center. There seemed to be an unwritten agreement among the merchants that no one should step on the rug, but that if any could reach the gem without trespass and without too much commotion he would be entitled to possess it. For a long time they wandered around the border, casting longing glances, but hiding their ambitions beneath expressions of courtesy. Finally the idea occurred to the tall merchant wearing the astrachan cap of the north, to commence rolling up the edge of the rug nearest him, and so to come nearer the center without 'trespass.' This he commenced to do, at first furtively and then with greater vigor. Soon the other merchants began to roll up their corners, until now it is only a question which will reach the diamond first.

"This is the tangle of European politics, and the all absorbing question of the near East which the Balkan war has now thrown into vivid outline.

"But it is a mistake to suppose that this is altogether a war of territorial aggrandizement planned by the unruly and restless Balkan governments to gratify their peoples' ambitions. It is a war for the emancipation of the christian population of European Turkey. The greater part of the six million inhabitants of Macedonia are of Serbian, Bulgarian, and Greek stock. The Turks are the military and agricultural overlords. And during five centuries the miserable population of that peninsula has been exploited for the support of the Ottoman regime. During the thirty-two cruel years of Abdul Hamid's tyranny that christian population suffered unspeakable indignities. They were taxed twenty-five per cent of their produce; they were compelled to give up their daughters for the Turkish harems; they were repressed from any attempt at education; they were forbidden to read any books or papers; they were imprisoned in the vilest dungeons; they were fleeced and harried and flogged, until the wonder is that they have survived."

Mr. Trowbridge, who is well informed on both the political and religious situation, says that this is actually a religious war, and is so regarded not only by the Turks, but by the Montenegrins and their allies.
