OREGON STATE FAIR GETS NEW PAVILION

Good List of Bills Passed by Oregon Legislature

Only two dissenting votes were cast against Moser's bill providing for an additional judge for Multnomah county when it was up for final passage yesterday.

The lower house of the Oregon legislature will remain in session without pay until March 1, it is expected that the senate will do likewise unless it can close up its affairs tomorrow.

The Senate yesterday passed the House bill carrying an appropriation of $60,000 for the Oregon State fair for a new pavilion. The governor vetoed an appropriation bill for the pavilion two years ago.

The 8-hour wage bill for women was killed, but its place is taken by the minimum wage bill which fixes the hours for all classes of work upon report of a commission to examine into and determine the circumstances surrounding all laborers.

The Senate committee on counties and state officers is splitting over the provisions of the governor's bill for classification of salaries of county officers and classification of counties.

Senator Wood has prepared a statement covering his idea as to the classification and some of the other members vary as to this scale.

A lively debate developed yesterday morning in the House when Senator Neuner's bill to appropriate $20,000 for an armory at Roseburg was being considered. The measure was finally passed.

Howard, of Douglas, a preacher, said he was opposed to war and believed that armories stimulated a war like spirit among boys. Other members held similar views.

Roseburg will provide $20,000 additional for the building.

There will be no investigation of Game Warden Finley's office by this legislature, as the Senate yesterday killed the House concurrent resolution, which called for an investigation. Coming so late in the session, the Senate deemed it unwise. Miller declared that the investigation is demanded by his constituents and that the warden has offices in Portland with high-salaried men, who spend thousands of dollars and the people wish to know how it is spent.

The bill by Senator Perkins to regulate the practice of dentists, stirred up quite a storm in the House yesterday morning. It was finally passed.

Olson and Applegren charged that the bill is aimed to give power to the State Board of Dental Examiners to drive out of business any dentist "who does not do business to suit them."

Upton and Forbes said the bill was aimed to broaden the law so that a graduate of any reputable college may take an examination in this state and be allowed to practice here.

The governor is authorized, in Olson's resolution adopted by the House last night, to appoint a committee for the investigation of the Portland Gas company's franchise.

The following bills were passed yesterday and will become laws unless vetoed by the governor:

Providing for teachers' training courses as optional for teachers' institutes.

University millage tax bill.

Providing for purchase of land at Champeog.

To reimburse Mrs. Cynthia Glasius for the death of her son on the Portage railway.

Relating to train crews.

Increasing efficiency of elementary schools.

Relating to the expense of state school superintendent.

Relating to railroad rights of way.

Relating to bridge for Portland, Eugene & Eastern railroad over Willamette river.

Relating to making and filing of plate.

Granting three additional deputies to Food and Dairy commissioner.

Relating to Ashland Normal school.

Relating to child labor inspector.

Appropriating $100 to pay V. E. Tracy, teacher in Central Oregon Normal school.

Governor West has signed S. B. 24, by Burgess, passed by the House yesterday, providing that dealers in meats shall no longer dupe the public by substituting goat meat for mutton.

Unity

Many of this vicinity are attending the revival meetings that are now in progress at the Free Methodist church.

Roy White and little daughter of Lents spent Sunday at the home of Mr. White's mother, Mrs. C. M. Oliphant.

John Palmquist spent Wednesday in Portland.

Mamie Pitts who has been quite ill is now much better, but will not be able to continue her school work this year.

H. C. Whilon and family spent Thursday at the home of Mr. Whilon's parents of Powell Valley, it being the occasion of his father's eightieth birthday.

Revival meeting in the Free Methodist church will be continued over next week with the afternoon prayer meeting at 2:30. Three good services on Sunday. Bishop Pearce will preach both morning and evening. At 2:30 p. m. sharp, in the Free Methodist church there will be an old fashioned Methodist Love Feast led by Rev. S. F. Pitts. Let everybody come and enjoy a good time.
