"The Linotype Way is the Way that Wins."

Official paper of the Town of Gresham, Oregon. Official paper of the Town of Fairview, Oregon.

Entered as second-class matter March 3, 1911, at the postoffice at Gresham, Oregon, under the act of March 3, 1879.

INCREASING THE PERCENTAGE.

A spirited and entertaining debate on a feature of the initiative law was terminated rather abruptly at Pomona grange on Wednesday for lack of sufficient time to continue it.

The question came up on a resolution, introduced by W. H. H. Dufur who is in favor of raising the percentage of names to be secured to place a measure on the ballot.

There are two sides to the controversy that ensued. Mr. Dufur claiming that the greater percentage would keep many unimportant measures from being initiated but it was contended by his opponents that the increase would prevent all individuals and many organizations, including the grange, from presenting bills, except the great corporations and "interests" to which money would be no object.

It was shown that the present voting strength of Oregon is about 300,000, against 165,000 at the last election. The increase is caused by the woman vote. At 8 per cent the number of names required on a petition was about 12,800; hereafter it will require about 24,000.

The state grange is practically the only organization that can get names for nothing, but the other costs run the expense of an initiative measure up to about $500. With nearly 50,000 names to secure many thousands of them would have to be paid for, which would bankrupt the order at once.

The question is an important one and should be thoroughly studied by every person, in the grange or out of it.

AN ENTERPRISING COMMUNITY.

The Fairview Commercial club is made up principally of young men, mostly newcomers, who are live wires and boosters for their community. Their public endeavors have been mentioned in these columns to some extent and they have the best wishes of the entire community for success in their efforts.

Secretary Bryan has already made his subordinate feel that he is boss of the state department.

The poor bachelor won't have anyone to tell him how to vote at the next election.

A correspondent in the Oregon City Courier nominates C. E. Spence, master of the Oregon State grange for governor, and the Courier intimates that the suggestion may be the right one.

At the last meeting of the Estacada city council Tuesday evening it was decided that the finances of the city were in such a condition that it would be necessary to curtail expenses and as the street lights were one of the largest items of expense that the P. R. L. & P. Co. be notified to discontinue the service immediately.

The Humphrey brothers are scheduled for execution at Salem tomorrow for murder. Governor West seems to have lost the courage of his convictions since the election last November.

ROSE CULTURE

the rugosa family such as Blanche double de Coubert, Mrs. Bruant and Conrad Meyer, which make fine, showy masses by themselves or as a background for other flowers; so many briars which may be treated in the same way, both the English sweet brier with the newer Penzance hybrids, and the Austrian briars among which is the good old Harrison yellow which spreads itself into a thicket if you will but let it, and makes the garden a mass of shimmering gold in early June.

There are the single Irish roses of which Welsh is constantly giving us variations like "Irish Elegance" and "Irish Simplicity," and the good old Madam Hardy and Madam Plantier, which grow into such great, broad shrubs that they give an air of luxuriance to the simplest garden.

Can you imagine anything more beautiful than a trellis covered with Dorothy Perkins and Debutante roses or the Wichurianas like Jersey Beauty and Evergreen Gem, with their great clusters of single and semi-double flowers followed by beautiful scarlet hips? Below the roses let us plant clumps of the English delphiniums in the softer, paler blues, with groups of Madonna lilies or white Japanese iris; and at their feet masses of the everblooming forget-me-nots and white garden pinks.

The soft pinks, whites and apricots of the roses, the beautiful soft blues of the delphiniums and the chaste beauty of the incomparable madonna lilies rising from the mounds and sprays of forget-me-nots in blues and pinks will make a picture not easily forgotten, and really very easily made. Let us grow such roses as Trier, half-climbing, half-bush, and altogether charming, with its semi-double blooms of soft white, flushed with pink, and its heart of glowing stamens, near some low-growing, blue creeping thing like the myosotis and plumbago.

But you say, roses will not do well planted with shrubbery and other flowers. All these which I have mentioned and many others will. And they need not be planted close to other things. The clumps may be so placed as to allow light and air for both roses and perennials. And you know you have made your beds so that there is plenty of food for all. Do you know how far a rambler rose will climb, and how many yards of trellis one root planted in such earth as I have described, will cover? Try it and see. These roses, too, are easily rooted, and do well on their own roots.

It is true that most of the hybrid perennials, teas and hybrid teas, do not thrive as well planted with other deep-rooted flowers; but we can use these trellis plantings and the more shrubby growing roses in our border beds where they will form at once a shelter from strong winds, a screen, if you wish it, and a background for the beds of choicer roses. These choicer roses may be planted in beds in masses of one color or variety, and in harmonizing masses of different colors, with only edgings of shallow-rooted things, like pansies of a single color, or better still, viola cornuta, the tufted pansy of English gardens, which is more perennial than the pansy and will blossom the season through.

This way of planting admits plenty of air and sunlight among the roses, and also permits the stirring of the soil. A bed of tea roses in the many tones of white, yellow and soft apricot, is very beautiful with an edging of yellow or white tufted pansies, or the ever-blooming forget-me-nots. A bed of Jeannette Heller roses would be very effective with a border planting of the polyantha rose, Perle d'Or. All of the baby rambler roses make very effective borders with roses of taller growth, and numberless beautiful color combinations may be worked out. A bed of pink and white Coquets, of course, we must have. To be sure they are rather weak necked and somewhat sprawling in habit; but they do well on their own roots, may be planted quite close together and their faults of growth may be corrected by careful cutting. And how they do bloom! A round bed with a central post for the beautiful pillar rose, Bardou Job, and filled with that altogether charming Irish "Betty," so gay and decorative with its quantities of semi-colored flowers, which are neither pink nor yellow, but a little of both, will be a constant delight. Helen Gould and Richmond, rosy red beauties, with never a hint of purple in their clear color, shall cool their glowing petals against the soft clearness of that wholly lovable Kaiserin Augusta Victoria; and La France, and her cousin White La France, in masses of blush and silvery pink, shall vie with them in beauty; and everywhere throughout the garden the beautiful climbing teas on posts and pillars will give height to the beds and relieve the garden of flatness and monotony.

I think the rose of which I want the greatest number, the queen of my own garden, shall be that patriotic with the plebian name, Frau Karl Druschki. The bush is of strong vigorous growth, with magnificent dark foliage, growing close up to the flowers; and in my garden at least, it has bloomed continuously. There certainly is no other rose of such perfect purity, such exquisite, transparent whiteness. Go into the garden in the dewy morning, and cut for the breakfast table a perfect dew-starred Druschki rose, with its softly folded petals, where the shadows of night still linger, and you will not need much else upon the table. A cup of coffee, a roll and an egg, with one Druschki rose. Who, could ask for a better breakfast? I am very often asked, how many varieties of roses I have; and I am obliged to say I do not know, for as yet the garden is only begun, and the varieties are being tried out. I do know that I have more varieties now than I shall have five years from now. I would rather have masses of chosen varieties than samples of many kinds; for you see I do not want a rosary of "assorted beads," not an horticultural museum; but a garden that shall be full of perennial joy.
