WOMEN AND BANKING

Women and banking have much in common. Thousands of women are working in banks in the United States. Joplin, Missouri, has a bank run by women. London, England, has a bank run exclusively for women, with Miss May Bateman as its manager. It was in England that the savings bank idea was originated by a woman, more than a century ago.

MANY WOMEN

are numbered among our patrons. We appreciate their patronage and invite others to follow them. Women are generally better savers than men. A bank account puts system into the running of a household, shows where every penny has gone, accumulates a balance for any sudden need, and gives the woman a certain influence not otherwise had. Let us advise you in investments.

You will get relief from the first dose, and finally the cough will disappear. O. H. Brown, of Muscadine, Ala., writes: "My wife was down in bed with an obstinate cough, and I honestly believe had it not been for Dr. King's New Discovery, she would not be living today." W. C. T. U. Notes

The Devil's Kindling Wood.

"Cigarettes have been called, 'The devil's kindling wood,' and a rousing fire they certainly kindle in the human system—a fire which must be kept alive by something stronger—and soon the smoker is pouring in 'the devil's kerosene oil,' which gradually burns up the fine mucous lining of the stomach and leaves the man a miserable wreck, and of about as much use to himself and to the world as the charred and tottering walls of a partially burned building.

"Boys, beware of 'the devil's kindling wood.' Beware of 'the devil's kerosene oil,' if you do not want your best energies to be burned to a crisp and your life to become as useless and dangerous as the blackened walls of a burned building, liable to fall at any time and crush the fond hopes of your friends and to destroy the happiness of your family and loved ones."

A Profitless Exchange.

"Many are the foolish bargains that are being made through love of strong drink. A well-known writer once said that there was an advertisement in one of the daily papers, to this effect: 'Wanted, a nice cottage and grounds in exchange for a lot of choice liquors.' Multitudes of drinking men have made such an exchange. Not only property, but happiness, home, the welfare of friends, character, prospects, everything have they exchanged for intoxicating liquors. So men sell their characters and clear conscience for money, for honors, for pleasures. They sell their souls for the world, and find that they have sold themselves for naught, as Esau for a mess of pottage, and Judas for thirty pieces of silver."

Worth More Than Taxes.

Returning from a recent local option meeting, a lad climbed upon his father's knee and asked:

"What way will you vote, papa—'wet' or 'dry'?"

"'Wet,' of course," replied the man.

"Papa, why will you vote 'wet'?" the child continued.

"Because," returned the parent, "the saloons help to pay the taxes." "Daddy, ain't I worth more to you than your taxes? If you vote 'wet,' maybe I'll be a drunkard some day."

The little fellow had been deeply impressed by the lecture at the schoolhouse that evening, and he failed to comprehend how his father could not understand as he did.

It was a sleepless night for that father, for those dreadful words kept ringing in his ears:

"If you vote 'wet,' maybe I'll be a drunkard some day."

Today there is not a stronger advocate of local option in all the state "That boy is worth more to me than all the property I could ever own," he declares, emphatically.—Selected.
